TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS AND EASELS

Some of our gadgets may come to you now in plain wire, because we cannot secure materials to give them that bright gold finish. They do the work just as well and many prefer them in their plain dress.

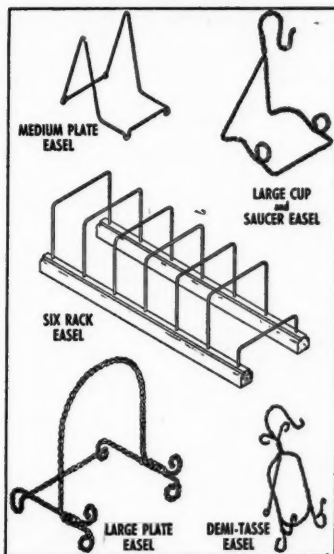

WE PAY ALL POSTAGE TO YOU. ARTICLES OF THE SAME PRICE MAY BE ASSORTED.

Dealers Attention!

Over 2000 Dealers handle these gadgets.

On orders of $5.00 or more we allow liberal discount. Write for Price List.

TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS

REGULAR HANGERS, 7-11 inch A simple little thing made of galvanized wire and a spring. Nothing exposed on front but four little tips of wire. Fits almost all plates. Can be cut down to fit real small ones but will not hold anything larger than 11 inches. A Hanger you can easily apply, and once applied, can instantly remove—on and off when desired.

Over Half Million Sold.

RETAIL PRICE

1	Postpaid	.....	.25
3	"	.....	.50
10	"	.....	$1.50

It costs us almost as much to mail one as for ten, hence the variation in price.

CUP PLATE HANGERS AND REGULAR HANGERS CUT DOWN to special order, 25c each.

LARGE HANGERS For plaques, platters, etc. Same as our Regular but of larger (galvanized) wire and spring. Be sure to state size wanted, or send us paper pattern.

OUR HEAVY, STURDY, EASELS

Medium Size Plate Easel Holds either saucer, plate or small platter. Heavy smooth wire, gilt finish, soldered one piece, up on legs, will not rock. Lasts a lifetime.

Large Cup and Saucer Easel A big sturdy easel. Heavy twisted wire. Holds all large cups and saucers. It gets the job done.

Demi-Tasse Cup and Saucer Easel Made of twisted wire. Takes up no more room than sitting in saucer. Makes cup and saucer collections more attractive. A big seller.

RETAIL PRICE

1	Postpaid	.....	.25
3	"	.....	.50
10	"	.....	$1.50

Large Plate and Platter Easel Extra heavy twisted wire. A big graceful easel. Just the thing for all heavy, large plates and platters.

Improved Six Rack Easel at Same Price It has everything. Two walnut finish heavy wire racks 4 inches wide, 4 inches tall, bent to slope back. Extra wood runners 13 inches long. Extra wires are instantly removable to make a flat package for shipping. This will be a boon to Show Exhibitors. An extra wire has been added to make it an elevated rack when you wish. It slants or slopes. Folds flat.

1	Postpaid	.....	.60
More than 1	.....	ea.	.50

— Button Dealers Take Notice —

New Eight Rack Easel Especially designed for Button Dealers cards. We haven't had time to make a cut of it yet. Two walnut finish wood runners 17 inches long. Extra heavy wire racks 8 inches wide, 6 inches tall, bent to the back. Eight spaces 2 inches apart. Completely collapsible. It displays flat, or at a slope. Fine for pictures or prints too.

1 or more, postpaid	.....	ea.	$1.00

You Still Have Time

To select a beautiful, lasting, valuable gift for the one that deserves it, and you know who I mean. So don't delay and take a chance at losing your selection; slip a check in the mail now and I'll rush it at this end. There is nothing better than good antiques and nothing that is more highly prized by the recipient.

When Better Furniture was Built Our Forefathers Built It.

I also have for sale a 7 piece BELTER SUITE, highly carved. In original condition. Just like day it left the factory. Write.

Some One Missed the Boat in October

On four fine pieces: 1—The German Hall Clock. 2—Pr. Vintage Cut Decanters. 3—Black and Gold Make-up Cabinet. 4—Chinese Pagoda Cabinet. Of course I know it was not your fault; the pictures were poor and you could not see how beautiful the coloring and patina is on these graceful antiques. To have just one of these in your home, be it ever so fine, will feed your pleasure as your friends cannot help but converse about its beauty and your fortune at finding it.

Your fortune is my loss for poor descriptions regardless these must be sold. Therefore drastic price reductions. So get Oct. Hobbies, on pages 6 and 7, and compare and order at once. 1—$400; 2—$75; 3—$100; 4—$150. That's all there is. Checks, please.

Merry Christmas To You All and many thanks for the courtesies you have extended.

May your heart be warm as some one is overjoyed when they receive your present selected from these offerings. May God bless you in the peaceful New Year for your wisdom you displayed in the past.

Other Offerings:

Pr. Gold-leaf frames, 16x20", 2 1/4" wide, in fine condition, with old steel engravings of the Lincoln and Washington families, one dated 1895. Pair.....$ 35.00
Mah. Hepplewhite Pembroke table, refinished, 32 1/2" wide, center board 18 1/2" wide, leaves
8 1/2", 27 1/2" from floor to top..... 125.00
Swell-front mahogany Hepplewhite inlaid dining-room piece, could be used in an apartment as a sideboard or in a large dining-room for an extra storage place. Very beautiful and also very unusual. Was apparently made from a Hepplewhite side-board, many long years ago, by joining the two ends together. This was a cabinet-shop job, the work is most carefully done, the top is pine and was put on at the time the work was done. Measures 33 1/2" wide, 43" tall, and 24 1/2" at widest part..... 275.00 Pair Hepplewhite commodes, both inlaid but not alike. Almost identical in size, and very likely made by the same cabinet shop. One has the cabinet man's advertisement. Both have some of the interior "fittings." These are rare, we will sell only as a pair. They would make most beautiful end-tables. Guaranteed original and are collector's pieces.

How to Make Money by Mail

Down-to-earth facts, directions (illustrated) for running business profitably, using expertly for your good fortune the employees, trains, planes which Gov't places at your disposal CHEAP. Get orders by mail, ship by express or freight or mail, get out of the kindergarten. . . 3d printing of this book now selling. It's YOUR winner.

THE EASY WAY

to start new or expand your present occupation. Do it NOW. Extraordinary plain, simple skill, know-how. No theory. Fact story of rich experience of author E. Rice day-by-day. How many times have we heard: "I wish I had some money, this patent would earn me a fortune," or "why can't my crop pay better?" or "I wish I knew how to sell this gadget myself," or "why should my boss alone do this when I know too how the money is made?" . . . Listen, you do not need money to start this Rice way. His method automatically pays all bills same day rendered, no bank loans, pay as you go, no borrowing from relatives or friends, no salesmen. Also no worry, quickly a home of your own all paid for. Rice paid off $5000 in mortgages a year after using this idea.

44 Years of PROOF

Sounds fishy? Sure, but this has been done steadily for 44 years, depression or no depression, by the author: that is why he wrote this book to pass the good word along. Make it do with anything you have which is salable. Rice made his plan go when living in one room in a city lodging house. Turn your city or country home, your work, your hobby, into money. How to get orders at cost of only $4 for each $100 taken in. The popular error to avoid in trying for sales. Business won free while others have to pay for it. How to conceive the money-getting advertisement. . . Profitable changes from ordinary ideas and methods. Not usual cut-dried pattern, 60 adventures, a dictated book in everyday talk, no dictionary writing.

Take a chance on this book being worth a fortune to you and yours and send $2.50. Book mailed same day order is received. Or ask two friends to chip in $3 cents each with your $4c to get this book. Hundreds of buyers whose letters we show you declare emphatically its superlative goodness. Follow its easy pattern for success. Cloth-bound, 512 pp., 8 1/2 by 5 1/2. Best seller, 3d edition now selling. Cut out the $2.50 HOW BOX here, pin or stick it to sheet of paper bearing your name and address, mail in envelope with money order or check for $2.50 to

Iron Pull Toys for Decorative Accents

By LARRY FREEMAN

THE ALERT antiquer is probably aware of what is happening in the toy field; the decorator is moving in. Items that were once coveted only by the collector of "toys for toys sake" are now sought by the person whose main interest is to acquire an amusing "accent note" for a living room, study or bedroom that is being "done over." Iron pull toys are a natural for this type of use. Their success is evidenced by their present scarcity and the high prices which available specimens command. Repainted and repaired, those former objects of play now grace the mantelpiece, serve as the base to a lamp, rest under a glass dome as table garniture, or are made into amusing bookends, paperweights and whatnot.

It was not always thus. The turn of the present century saw thousands of these toys being kicked around the play rooms of America, piled in attic store rooms along with other childhood discards, or tossed upon the ashheap and promptly forgotten. As indigenous to American culture as mechanical banks—and often made by the same manufacturers, these tiny horse-drawn vehicles were a part of the play-life of every child. They were made in size suited to both the smallest and the most affluent purse. Woolworth's carried tiny replicas of fire engines at five and ten cents, Wanamaker's offered large and fully equipped hook and ladder outfits at five dollars and up. Popular from the 1880's through 1910, these iron pull toys did much to break the back of German competition and give America its own and unique toy industry.

Anyone who has seen a collection of these horse-drawn pull toys is at once impressed with their infinite variety and with the precision in duplicating, down to finest details, the vehicles of a bygone day. In collecting toys and advertising material for use in our book on the subject, we were ever aware of the pains taken by American toy manufacturers to make their pull toys a select and sturdy product. In the cheapest varieties men, animals and movable equipment were cast together with the wagon frame; but in the better types drivers were detachable, reins and fire hose could be taken out, and horses could be unhitched. A few even had a bell attached which would ring as the toy was drawn across the room. All manner of transportation device was shown, with the fire wagon the great popular favorite.

The accompanying figure shows some of the types of iron pull toys in the Freeman collection. Viewing left to right and from top row down we have: (1) a highhatted gentleman driving to town in a smart surrey, (2) the hose cart, with detachable nozzle and hose, rushing to a fire, (3) an early large baggage transfer wagon that has lost its driver, (4) a contractor's dump cart, (5) the rare ox-drawn cart, (6) a "Fire Patrol" wagon, (7) a small donkey cart, (8) the police patrol, (9) a covered ice wagon, (10) the rare Hansom Cab with driver seated aloft, (11) a mowing machine with cutting bar that lifts up and down, (12) a donkey-drawn two seated wagon, perhaps a "Democrat," (13) a sulkey plow, (14) another fire patrol, (15) a rare hose cart, (16) a large hook and ladder, (17) hook and ladder with bell attachment, (18) small steam fire engine, (19) another type of hose cart, and (20) an emergency fire wagon.

"We are frequently asked, 'who made all these toys?' One answer is that the best and most uniform in size and treatment were made by the Ives Company of Bridgeport, Conn. This company, founded in 1865, has only recently gone out of business. In the Ives catalogs we see the flow-ering of the iron pull toy. Besides the carriages of society and the vehicles of commerce, we find trains and houseboats. Some day their definite history will be fully written. In the meantime, collectors are ever on the alert for new varieties. The search for rare types may, in time, run a close parallel with the hunt for rare mechanical banks. Decorators, of course, are more interested in size, subject and shape than in rarity. Finally, there is the search by men who are neither toy collectors nor decorators. They are simply looking for a type of toy that they played with as a child at Grandma's house—something out of their past. All this adds up to Demand.

Those who are fortunate enough to have an old iron pull toy in their possession should give the matter second thought before disposing of it. Get it out and look at it. By so doing you can recapture something of the sanity of childhood "when the world was young and marvelous to behold."

British Young People Going In For Antiques

A recent Associated Press report from London says that British antique dealers, once patronized only by the wealthy, have a new class of clients—young people—who are helping stimulate a boom in the London antiques business. The report further states:

"Seated in his renaissance office, Frank Partridge, veteran London and New York dealer, attributed the increased antique business to three factors.

"These, he said, are an increased appreciation of old furniture by young and old, stimulated by war's destruction, the fact that the price of second hand or utility furniture is out of proportion and the belief that antiques are an investment."

"Business is so good, Partridge said, he wished he could bring back from his New York showroom some of the precious pieces he sent there for safety at the start of the war—a wise move, it turned out, for Partridge's London showroom was bombed during the February, 1941, blitz.

"Prices have gone up 18 percent in the last 18 months," he said, asserting that English silver and china had risen especially.

"Other antique dealers along New Bond st. and in the St. James square area, where show windows gleam with fine old furniture and silver, say they notice a demand for walnut. All tell of an increased interest in tapestry.

"None of London's larger antique showrooms has been missed by American soldiers, Wacs, Red Cross girls, dealers say.

"But," says one, "they can only buy small pieces. The girls always ask for Wedgwood china."

Collecting Records in Occupied Holland

By LEO RIEMENS

NOW THAT at last the war is over, and one is able to resume contact with the outer world, I am delighted to make use of the hospitality of Stephen Fassett to let American collectors know some of the news from this side of the water. Before anything else, however, I want to thank in this way all the many collectors who have written such cordial letters to me during the past few weeks, some even taking the trouble to send whole parcels of choice things we had to do without for so long a time. They will all hear from me at length, but as it gets monotonous to repeat the same information so often, and as there may be new collectors who are also interested, I shall briefly state the most important pieces of news here.

Almost everybody inquires after my friend Robert Bauer, famous for his book Historical Records which collectors usually call The Bauer Catalog. I am sorry I cannot give any information as to his present whereabouts—in fact, I do not even know whether he is still alive or not. When the war broke out, he did not want to serve in the German army and therefore spent some time in Sweden. Later, he was assured that he could safely return to Italy, which he did, remaining there until 1943. When his mother died he had to go to his Wiesbaden home for the burial, and it was then, it seems, that the war net caught him. After serving on the Russian front, he was transferred to Italy where he acted as an interpreter. The last letter I had from him was dated April, 1944.

The collection of Dr. Otto Muller, perhaps the largest in Europe in the matter of Italian G&T's and Fonotipias, was completely destroyed when a bomb hit his home in Leipzig. He was himself in Milan, at the time.

Paul Wilhelm, the third German collector whose name is well known to Americans (his wife is an American), was well when I last heard from him in June, 1944. As he lived well outside Dresden, it is possible that his collection did not suffer.

Personally I weathered the war and the occupation well, with my collections of records and autographed photos of opera singers fully intact. Living in occupied territory, was scarcely enjoyable, but the first three years of the war were thrilling ones from the collector's point of view. As Germany had no shellac, they made a rule that for every new record bought, two old ones had to be delivered over the counter in exchange, for the melting pot. Having foreseen some such regulation, I had already provided myself with several thousand broken and worn out dance records, so that when the time came I was able to take full advantage of the situation. I succeeded in getting access to many stores of melting pot records, and by offering double the weight of whatever I extracted from those scrap piles, was very often allowed to take out what I wanted. Having the cooperation of several shops and of at least one importer, I was able to save from destruction some very exciting and valuable old records. Among these were: a totally unknown Lyrophone of Francisco D'Andrade singing Barbiere and Guglielmo Tell; an unknown Odeon of Felia Litvinne in Trovatore; five unpublished Odeon tests by Maria Ivogun in duets with her husband Karl Erb; a Beka record made in Germany by the American soprano Rachel Frease-Greene; Pathe's by Ernest Van Dyck, Imbart de la Tour and others; as well as many important G&T's nobody knew about.

In October, 1943, this source was stopped when Germany closed down all her record factories. Not a single new record has been sold her since; consequently prices for second-hand copies have soared above any reasonable level. All our war-time records came from Germany; there were none from France and, after 1941, none from Italy. Among the more important issues were HMV and Polydor versions of the St. Matthew Passion of Bach, of which the former, recorded in a Leipzig cathedral with Lemnitz, Beckmann, Erb and Husch as soloists, was by far the better. The famous Telefunken company disappeared. Polydor was bought up by Siemens, appearing during the last year as Siemens-Spezial. This organization claimed to have found a new technique of recording, and certainly the quality of their sound reproduction was far in advance of the other makes. They had a fine list of artists, too, and it is a pity that this company existed only for a year or so. I wonder if their factories survived the bombing but am doubtful because Polydor-Siemens was near Hanover. If the factories were bombed and the master records destroyed, these war-time issues will become top rarities. In any case, I am especially careful with my copy of Victoria Ursuleac in a scene from Richard Strauss's latest opera, Capriccio, conducted by Clemens Krauss, the librettist of this opera. Both singer and conductor appeared in the world premiere of this work. The record was released in October, 1943, the very month that pressing was stopped. I doubt if more than a few hundred copies of it were ever issued.

Schlusnus also made several new recordings, as did Tiana Lemnitz, Maria Reining, Max Lorenz, the veteran Karl Erb, and most of the other famous singers. Frieda Leider, so famous for her Wagnerian interpretations, made a sensational comeback as a Leider singer at the age of 55. Among the exciting HMV's of hers that were released during the war is one of the finest recordings of Schubert's Erlking I have ever heard. Another highlight was the Tannhauser duet, sung by Maria Reining and Max Lorenz.

Since 1941, many famous singers have died over here, though surprisingly few direct war casualties have become known. Aino Ackte died in Helsinki last year and I was surprised to learn that the news of her death was not published in America. In 1944, Holland lost its finest contralto, Maartje Offers. In Germany, the following artists died: the bass Josef Von Manowarda; the Munich soprano Elisabeth Feuge (suicide); the Odeon tenor Valentin Haller; and veterans like Ernst Krauss, Wilhelm Gruning, Marie Dietrich, Lucy Weidt. In France, the Pathe baritone Andre Bauge was killed in an air raid. Edmee Favart and Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck died in 1941. In Italy, Edoardo Garbin, the famous tenor, and the baritone Luigi Rossi-Morelli died. A friend of mine who was forced to work in Germany has just returned with a rumour that the celebrated baritone, Willi Domgraf-Fassbender, had been killed in an air raid in Magdeburg, but so far there has been no confirmation.

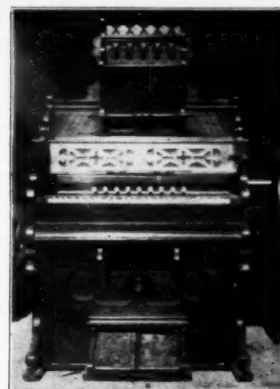

In Italy, many very fine new singers have appeared. In fact, the younger generation there is vocally much better than any of the preceding ones. I particularly recommend Ferruccio Tagliavini, a lyric tenor with a voice like Gigli in his youth, but without the vulgarity of style. In florid and bel canto parts, he surpasses every tenor since De Lucia, and his record of Una furtiva lagrima is the best I have ever heard of this aria. I also hope the young contralto Fedora Barbieri will eventually be heard in America. I heard her as Dame Quickly in Falstaff when an Italian season was given here in 1943, and her voice reminded me strongly of Marie Delna's. At La Scala, Baccaloni was succeeded by a young bass Vito De Taranto, who has the same sense of comedy and an even greater voice. In Elda Ribetti they have a young coloratura soprano who sounds as well as she looks. A fine dramatic soprano is Germana Di Giulio. What is so enjoyable about all these young Italian singers is that they not only have fine voices but a wonderful sense of style as well. Curiously, most of them come from Florence and have been pupils in acting of Maria Labia, a former soprano star whom American collectors know through her Edison records.

On the other hand, during these war years Germany has not produced a single new name worthy of mention. The few newcomers on records, like the dramatic soprano Helena Braun and the tenor Horst Taubmann, and so on, were all mediocre. The Meistersinger performance I heard over the radio in 1943 was a sad affair indeed.

If any collector wants to know full details about anything concerning records, artists or music that has happened over here during the war, I shall be delighted to let him have all the information at my disposal. For the benefit of those not yet in touch with me, may I add that my address is now 2de Schuystraat 195, Den Haag, Holland.

Though life was never very cheerful here under German occupation, the situation grew rapidly worse and became really intolerable when the chances of war began to turn against her. In 1943 they confiscated our radio sets (need I say how much I miss my beautiful radio-phonograph combination?), then they stole all our bicycles. Worst of all, forced labour in Germany was introduced, and I actually had to remain in hiding for almost the whole of last winter. The less I say about that winter the better I shall be pleased. No electricity, no gas, no light, no fuel, and practically no food. Often I wake up nights and have to pinch myself to find out whether I really came through it all right. We all owe a great debt to America for having come so gallantly to our rescue, and for continuing to help us out with food and other things. It will be years before Holland has regained some semblance of prosperity, but at least we now know that every day is bringing us nearer to normal conditions.

This fine old ORGAN of walnut is in good playing condition. I also have a few others in stock at wholesale prices.

The Curious History of Music Boxes

By Moserick & Heckert

The story of automatic musical instruments, from their earliest conception down through the years to the invention of the phonograph, is authentically traced in this unusual book, that contains the description and interesting historical background of music boxes of all types, and illustrates many of the rarest examples. Some of these took strange shapes, such as the butterfly music box, or the musical pistol, and many others, and are pictured for the first time in this limited edition, which also includes a section on

CORRECTION

The following paragraph from Stephen Fassett's CHALIA article was inadvertently omitted from the October issue of HOBBIES. It should have appeared at the top of 17:

Her Mexican career over, she once more returned to New York, taking 13 days for the journey because of burned and blown-up railroad bridges in Mexico. In 1914 she sang in Cuba and Venezuela and in 1916 the latter country heard her for the last time. Since then, she has made her home in New York City with her husband,

Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists

COLLECTORS' VOTE ON "THE SUPREME FIFTEEN"

By ULYSSES (JIM) WALSH

IT WAS NOT in the least a surprise to me that Billy Murray was voted by HOBBIES readers to be the greatest pioneer recording artist. Frankly, I should have regarded any other outcome of the tabulation as an upset. I was surprised, however, when Jimmy Martindale, of Brooklyn, who is one of Billy's most intimate friends and probably owns more Murray records than any other collector, decided not to place the beloved "Boss" alone on a pedestal, as I had anticipated, but to make a three-way tie of first place by letting Henry Burr and Ada Jones stand there with him.

"I think," Jimmy wrote, "your decision to tie Billy and Hank for first place is perfectly considered, but Ada Jones belongs there, too. Not only did Ada come into her greatest popularity at the time she teamed up with the Boss, but Billy, in my estimation, achieved his most marked public recognition as Ada's singing partner. . . . Ada and Billy seem to have supplemented each other in a perfect manner and their careers interlocked at a time when the public was most phonograph conscious. . . . Like yourself, I would personally have liked to have given the top role to the Boss all by 'hissself.' However, I do feel that he must share it not only with Hank but dear little Ada."

Jimmy's other choices are: 2—Collins and Harlan; 3—Macdonough; 4—Spencer; 5—Porter; 6—Stanley; 7—Stewart; 8—Walter Van Brunt; 9—Golden; 10—Quinn; 11—Campbell; 12—Bob Roberts.

"I think," he wrote, "that Walter is deserving of the No. 8 position. His recording rise was very rapid and he built up an extremely strong following." My own feeling is that Walter Van Brunt (known nowadays as Walter Scanlan) came along just a little too late to be considered a pioneer recording artist, and I had not therefore considered this good friend of mine for my list. I emphatically hold, however, that Walter belongs high on any list of the greatest all-time popular recording artists.

If I was surprised to find Jimmy Martindale making a three-way tie of first place, there was no surprise whatever in learning that Frank Glootdt, of Chicago, placed the distinguished Mr. Murray in first place all to himself. Frank has a huge Murray collection—in fact, I doubt that he is strongly interested in any other recording artist—and if I were called on to name the most unqualifiedly enthusiastic Billy Murray admirer in the world, I'd even have to pass by Jimmy Martindale and myself shout the name of Frank Glootdt.

"Billy Murray," the Chicagoan wrote, "is my choice for first place because, ever since my childhood and primary school days, he has been my favorite recording artist. I can never forget when I first heard his clear, golden tenor voice sing such popular songs as 'Honey Boy,' 'Cheyenne,' 'Casey Jones,' 'I Remember You,' and 'Meet Me in St. Louis, Louis,' just to name a few old items as reminders. I doubt if ever any other artist will equal Murray's career, making records dating from 1896 to 1942. . . . Murray was just a natural-born singer, and at no time in his early recording days did he two-time his name on record labels to fool the public, as some artists have done for income's sake. I see no reason why Billy Murray should not occupy No. 1 position on the Supreme 15."

Glootdt's other choices are: 2—Ada Jones; 3—Collins and Harlan; 4—Burr; 5—Harry Tally; 6—Stanley; 7—J. W. Myers; 8—Campbell; 9—Golden; 10—Macdonough; 11—Dudley and Quinn; 12—Spencer and Stewart.

A. R. (Jack) Via, Jr., of South Boston, Va., is a jeweler, and he resorted to the language of his profession in explaining why he gave first place to—you've guessed it—Billy Murray.

"I nominate Billy for first place," Jack said. "He is unchallenged. He dominates the field as a diamond surpasses other gems. He is more versatile than any of the others and, I believe, would go over swell today."

Arthur Collins is the Virginian's choice for second place. "I place comedy ahead of ballads," Via explained, adding: "I like the 'coon songs' and their situations. I like the timbre of Collins' voice, his interpretations and his style. I do not especially care for Byron G. Harlan, except as an assistant to help Collins put over his songs, but they belong together."

"I give third place, almost ahead of Collins," Jack said, "to Billy Golden. He is one of my prime favorites. I guess I smile every time I think of him."

"Let's give fourth place to Bob Roberts," Jack continued. "I don't have so many records by him, but those I have are masterpieces. Eddie Norton should come along in here somewhere, so let's tie him with Roberts for fourth place."

"Let's give a lady a break. I think Ada Jones should come in fifth place. She seems to have attained Billy Murray's enunciation and interpretation, or 'styling,' maybe I should say."

"Although Uncle Josh laughed too much at his own stories," Via wrote, "I guess he was doing no more than the present applause system does for the radio gag man. I put him sixth."

"Len Spencer seems to fit in seventh place. The word 'versatile' should be used again for him, because he could take a variety of parts—speeches, recitations, descriptives and comedy."

Jack said he placed Harry Macdonough in eighth place as his first choice of ballad singers; Frank C. Stanley in ninth, and Henry Burr, tenth. Concerning his "low-rating" Burr, he said: "Placing him tenth probably will disgust lots of collectors. I know he is one of the tops, but I just don't like his solo voice. It needs vibrato. However, I think he is swell in duets and quartets." He listed Albert Campbell in eleventh place and Steve Porter in twelfth.

Joseph Fortgang, of New York, is, like Allen Debus, a record collector barely old enough to vote, if that. He has a program called "Vaudeville Isn't Dead," which he gives under the name of Joe Franklin from radio station WNEW, New York, at 6:35 each Sunday evening, playing old records of the types he collects. An ardent admirer of Henry Burr, he gives him a first place tie with Murray. His other choices are: 2—Collins; 3—Stanley (who, by the way, showed surprising strength, appearing on every list—certainly a striking proof of the permanent appeal of the great basso who has been dead 35 years); 4—Jones; 5—Harlan; 6—Spencer; 7—Porter; 8—Macdonough; 9—Harrison; 10—Quinn; 11—Morton; 12—Roberts; 13—Campbell; 14—Tally.

Joe also said that if he were not required to stick to the pioneers, his all-time list would be: 1—Burr, Murray, Billy Jones and Ernest Hare; 2—Collins; 3—Sam Ash and Lewis James; 4—Irving Kaufman and Walter Scanlan; 5—Al Jolson; 6—George M. Cohan; 7—Ada Jones and Vaughn De Leath; 8—Stanley; 9—M. J. O'Connell and Elliott Shaw; 10—William J. Halley.

William A. Dyer, Jr., general manager of the Indianapolis Star, sent only a partial list. "I am enthusiastically for Billy Murray as No. 1," he said, "and would pair him with no one except, possibly, Ada Jones,"

THE VETERAN MOTOR CAR CLUB MIDSUMMER TWO-DAY MEET

By MRS. J. B. VAN SCIVER, JR.

OVER FIVE hundred people attended the midsummer two-day Meet sponsored by the New York Regional Division of the Veteran Motor Car Club of America, the biggest affair ever planned by the New York club, as well as one of the most interesting. The New York division is a branch of the New England club, and both are national in scope and membership.

On the morning of the opening of the Meet, veteran and antique motor vehicles of all descriptions could be seen driving from all directions and on all roads leading to historic Fairfield County in Connecticut, for the first day's event, which was held on the grounds of Ira Warner's spacious estate overlooking Long Island Sound, near Westport.

Some of the automobiles that came from nearby were in the line-up early, but most of them came around noon, in time to see James Melton, Metropolitan Opera tenor, driving his handsome red 1907 Stanley Steamer, a Gentleman's Speedy Roadster, at the head of a procession of his entries, which included several steamers—it was a steam car that began his collection—a 1904 Reo, a 1904 Columbus Electric driven by Mrs. Melton, a 1911 Mercedes, a 1907 Locomobile, a 1905 Buick, a 1914 Mercer, a 1903 Cadillac and a fine 1909 White touring car. Mr. & Mrs. Ira Warner had three cars there, their two Electrics which have been constantly in use during gas rationing, and a very old fire engine, which was drawn up in the center of the line-up beside a huge old fire engine and hose truck belonging to Alec Ulmann, Connecticut, who is president of the New York Club. Mr. Ulmann had six other cars there, entered many of the contests and in addition, was master of ceremonies.

The big fire engine was equipped with an amplifier and a microphone, which was ably manned during the Meet by the field director, the master of ceremonies, James Melton or Colonel Stoopnagle, the radio comedian and Saturday Evening Post humorist. A bevy of lovely girls watched the races in the high back of the fire engine, sitting where the firemen formerly sat, from which vantage point they could see the entire course.

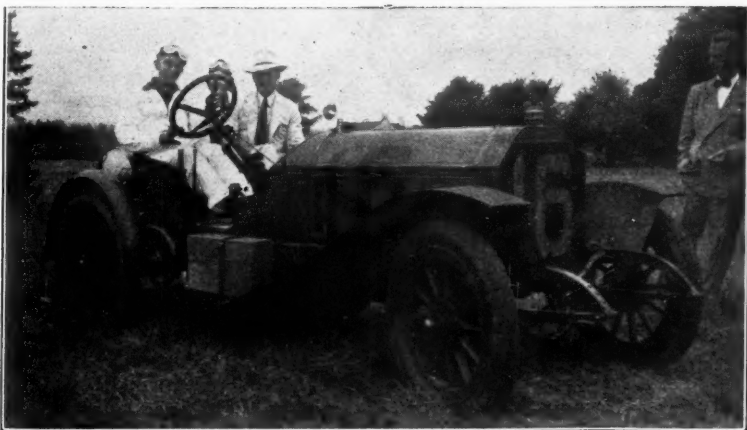

Before the picnic luncheon, during which there were recorded songs by James Melton, there was time to inspect the 55 antique and veteran motor vehicles, as well as several early motor cycles. Crowds congregated around some of the old and beautifully restored models. An amusing contrast with these earliest cars was offered when R. G. Sceli from Hartford, Conn., drove up in his streamlined super-modern model, built from his own design, which looked like the pictures of "The Car of the Future."

The program opened with the one-cylinder race, which was won by Mr. Melton's 1904 Reo. The Electric auto.

CURRIER & IVES

By JOHN RAMSAY

THE YEAR 1857 is important in the history of the Currier house because in that year Nathaniel Currier made James M. Ives his full partner, but it marks no change in its policy or production. Ives, who was born in New York in 1824, and was a brother-in-law of Charles Currier, Nathaniel's brother, was engaged as a bookkeeper in 1852. But he was an amateur and self-taught artist of some ability, and his interest and influence soon went beyond the firm's accounts. It is probably only a coincidence that the series of splendid large folio sporting, country, Western and clipper ship prints which have made Currier & Ives famous began with Fanny Palmer's hunting prints and the clipper ships "Sovereign of the Seas" and "Hurricane" of 1852. But Ives did a few prints himself, added figures to landscapes by Fanny Palmer, who was not good on them, and supervised the staff of lithographers.

This continuity of prints and policy is shown in the re-issues of several prints, some, like Tait's "The Last War-Whoop" and "American Winter Scenes, Trout Fishing on Lake Chateaugay," first published by Currier, having both his and the Currier & Ives imprint on the second issue, others, like "The Cares of a Family" showing only the partnership name the second time. The parade of fine prints continued with Eastman Johnson's "Husking" and Tait's "Life of a Hunter" pair of 1861, and Durrie's "Autumn in New England, Cider Making" of 1863. The firm employed a number of competent lithographers, Fanny Palmer, Louis Maurer, John Cameron, J. Schultz, Franz Venino and others, and most of these did original lithographs, although they did not always sign them. But they also bought paintings by established artists, Tait, Durrier, Charles Parsons, Eastman Johnson, Nast, Innes and others, which were copied on the lithographing stones by their staff.

Naturally, the Currier prints show as wide a variation in quality as they do in subject. Most were drawn to order by the staff artists, the heads of the firm selecting subjects which they thought would sell well. Paintings were bought at current prices, and five or ten dollars were paid for sketches from which lithographs were made, although Louis Maurer, working independently, received from forty to fifty for plates ready to print. Maurer and Fanny Palmer were the most versatile of the Currier artists, although the latter preferred landscapes, and Maurer remembered that she was often sent out in the country with Currier's horse and buggy to spend a day sketching what might be a popular view. Others, of course, specialized on certain subjects, like Durrie, "The Snow Man" and Cameron who did horses and Worth with his "comics." The cheaper prints were colored on a sort of "production line," the artists sitting at a long table, each applying a color to the prints as they passed along, but the finer ones were done individually, often by artists working at home. Many were sold at retail in the store managed by Daniel W. Logan, and others were distributed through push-cart peddlers and other shops. The small folios cost $60 a thousand, to retail at twenty cents each, but the larger and finer ones cost up to five dollars. No sales records remain, but it is known that 73,000 copies of one of Cameron's negro comics were sold, which is evidence of the amount of business the firm did.

The Civil War affected Currier & Ives' business, as was natural. In fact, they abandoned Currier's old policy of political caution and neutrality by coming out wholeheartedly for Lincoln in 1860. They issued several fine early portraits of him as a candidate for the presidency, and followed these with a long series of prints commemorating his life, as well as a number of cartoons. Since the great newspapers of the day opposed Lincoln as a radical and a trouble-maker, it is not too much to claim that these prints showing him as he was and not as "the soul of Uriah Heep in the body of an ape," in one influential editor's words, helped to elect him president. Shortages and other wartime conditions naturally confined the output of the firm for several years to a long series of small folio battle scenes, celebrating even unimportant skirmishes, portraits of generals and admirals and, of course, some sentimental pictures like "The Soldier's Dream of Home."

The post-war years saw more fine prints rolling from the press of Currier & Ives, "Autumn in New England, Cider Making" by Durrie in 1866, his "Home to Thanksgiving" in 1867, and "The Grand Drive, Central Park" in 1869. But changes came, too, the first when they left the plant they had occupied for twenty-seven years. There were several later moves, which may be summarized here;

1857-1865
152 Nassau Street and 2 Spruce St.
1866-1872
152 Nassau Street and 33 Spruce St.
1873-1874
125 Nassau Street and 33 Spruce St.
1874-1877
123 Nassau Street and 33 Spruce St.
1877-1894
115 Nassau Street and 33 Spruce St.
1894-1896
108 Fulton Street and 33 Spruce St.
1896-1907
33 Spruce Street.

American standards of quality and design, in common with all standards, not only in this country but in Europe, dropped very low during the 1870s and 1880s, and Currier & Ives, of course, continued to give their customers what they wanted. These were sentimental subjects, which are coarser and heavier than the earlier ones, comics which are not irresistibly funny to us of today, more religious pictures and, as always illustrations of current events, now mainly sporting ones. One curious phase of this era's taste in art and applied art was its admiration for things which looked like something else, and its placid acceptance of imitations. Color lithography had been developed until really fine reproductions could be made, and some of these copied oil paintings so closely that they were mounted on fabric, and even showed the brush marks in relief. But Currier & Ives never owned the equipment for color printing.

They did, however, publish quite a number of oil lithographs and even chromolithographs, which were printed by others. But their large folios of this period are largely racing or sporting subjects, with some advertisements and posters, subjects which ornamented stables, barber-shops, possibly dens, but certainly not front parlors. The Centennial Exposition of 1876 inspired several small folio historical prints, "General Francis Marion of South Carolina" and the Washington subjects, which are among the houses's finest, but most of their prints, while they continued to reflect current life, fashions and interests and were still "Colored Engravings" for the People are less carefully drawn and colored than the earlier ones.

Nathaniel Currier retired in 1880, dying in 1888, and was succeeded by his son, Edward West Currier. J. M. Ives died in 1895, and was also succeeded by a son, Chauncey Ives. By then, the house had outlived its market. Chauncey Ives sold his interests to E. W. Currier in 1902, but Currier did little lithographing work and finally sold the establishment in 1907 to Daniel W. Logan, Jr., son of the firm's sales manager, who sold out its stock and equipment.

CIRCUS CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

By A. MORTON SMITH

GARGANTUA, the famous gorilla, impersonates Santa Claus on the Christmas greeting card of Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

THE CHRISTMAS greeting card is a cheerful little reminder that comes to your mail box once a year, to make you know that a friend is thinking of you at this glad season.

But in the field of circusiana, the Christmas greeting card has added significance. Not only does it serve its purpose of extending the Yuletide wishes of the sender, but it often is a valuable collection piece.

Ingenious circus officials and performers and circus fans have designed greeting cards that are treasured by collectors, many of whom have extensive accumulations of them.

Some are of historical value. For example, Col. C. G. Sturtevant of Texas, historian of the Circus Fans association, makes a practice of attaching photographs of early day circus artists to his greeting cards. One of his cards pictured Romeo Sebastian, star somersault equestrian, along with the legend that he was "born June 2, 1850 and died February 3, 1919. A pupil of Sig Sebastian Quaglienla, rode in the greatest circuses of America and Europe." A collection of the colonel's pictures, now numbering 10 or 12, is indeed a valuable addition to any photograph collection dealing with early-day circus artists.

J. A. Havirland of Illinois, reproduced an illustrated advertisement of the Yankee Robinson Circus of a quarter of a century ago on his greeting card and Mr. and Mrs. Sverre O. Braathen of Wisconsin had Ringling Brothers 1917 advertisement on their card a few years ago. Don Howland of Ohio reproduced full size, a valuable old P. T. Barnum Great Roman Hippodrome herald for a mammoth greeting card. An item of rare value was a reprint of the first known color printed circus poster, advertising R. Sands & Co.'s "Hippoferaean Arena," of 1849, which the late Harry Hertzberg sent his circus and circus fan friends.

In the field of photography, many desirable contributions have been made by circus fans via the greeting card. One year, George Duffy of New York designed a folder containing photographs of two score old-time circus owners for his holiday message. Parade scenes are favorites of many fans. Joe Minchin of New Jersey had a card showing an elephant pulling a wagon. Bill Kasiska of Wisconsin revealed a band wagon on the main street of his home town; Edward R. Meyers of Michigan exhibited the Two Jesters calliope steamed up in the Hagenbeck-Wallace parade and Sverre Braathen had a fine old-time picture of the Three Graces band wagon.

Tributes have been paid great artists of the circus on Christmas cards. Dr. H. H. Conley of Illinois sent out pictures of Mrs. Al Ringling when she was snake charmer and only woman performer during Ringling Brothers maiden season. Edmond Holt of Allentown, Pa., depicted Terrell Jacobs and his waltzing lion; E. W. Cripps of Canada, showed H. B. Gentry with animals of his show back in 1912; Hugh McGill of California, used a picture of beauteous Ernestine Clark, circus aerialist; and the late James V. Chloupek, also of California, chose clown alley of Cole Brothers Circus one Christmas season.

Circus press agents, whose careers depend upon their originality, have contributed some of the unique Christmas cards. Sam Stratton's card one year showed only the hands of Jake Posey, famous old boss hostler, now living in California, holding the reins of a 40-horse team in parade. R. M. Harvey pictured himself on an elephant's back and Harry B. Chipman reproduced a small "extra edition" of the Hollywood Daily News, with himself pictured in front of a circus wagon featured on page one. Justus Edwards used a letterhead, bearing his photograph alongside that of Santa Claus, both with handle-bar mustaches reminiscent of circus "brothers," in which "Claus & Edwards Combined" presented "Yuletide Greetings."

Circus enterprises have issued some of the most elaborate greeting cards. Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey one year had Gargantua, the famed gorilla, masquerading as Santa. Bailey Brothers has Santa Claus riding a bareback horse. Parker and Watts Circus depicted a pretty girl riding Roman style on two lions, and Al G. Barnes Circus employed a hippopotamus' picture for a "roaring" greeting. Little Miss Norma Davenport and one of her elephants adorned the card of Bailey Brothers circus, owned and operated by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Davenport, and Russell Brothers' crowded midway was exhibited in colors on one of their seasonal greetings.

A number of novel creations suggest the circus atmosphere. G. H. Barlow, III, of New York, once sent a miniature circus sledge hammer with his greeting card attached. Cole Brothers Circus used a card shaped like two reserved seat tickets to "Christmas Joy." One season, Mr. and Mrs. Braathen used a "route folder" and actually revealed they had traveled 3,630 miles that year to see 31 performances of eight circuses, giving the dates and towns. Harry A. Atwell, the circus photographer pictured himself as a billboard putting up a 24-sheet greeting, and Fred W. Schlotzhauer of Illinois had Santa Claus and little Mr. 1936 shot out of a cannon, a la Zacchini.

December in the '80's

Much progress is made in a period of sixty years, yet milady's fashions often revert to the old for inspiration. The fashion research artist has only to look back into the magazines of 1886 to see that the fashion artists of today, and particularly the hat designers, have taken their inspiration from the styles of that day. Peterson's Magazine for December, 1886, promotes hats that are almost the counterpart of today's styles. They're taller than usual, with the smaller brim, and they're decorated with plumes and bows. Browsing through museum magazine files, we note:

In December, 1886, the dresses were long with a pronounced bustle-like effect.

The radio and bridge parties were not common then, so madame was instructed in the gentle art of making sofa pillows and scarf-covers in the cross and embroidery stitch.

The editor's column for the month of December, 1886, contained such interesting chit-chat as:

"Eiderdown Petticoats are becoming more popular than they were, and a few women run a steel round the edge to keep the heavy winter skirt out. An elastic band placed inside, and secured to each side, keeps the petticoat back. These eiderdown petticoats are at once warm and light, and, therefore, excellent wear for winter."

"Odds and Ends of wool may be knitted into single socks and stockings to be filled with little gifts at Christmastide. Any bright colors can be knitted up—the more the merrier. These odd hose are often kept as souvenirs of Father Christmas or Santa Claus's night visit, long after the remembrance of the contents has faded away. All knitters know how these odd ends accumulate, and how often there is enough for one sock or stocking, and not a pair. Miniature socks in silk are now used as purses, with a clasp and snap sewed on at the top of the leg."

And here are some recipes from that issue that sound good enough for present day:

"Turkey with Oysters—Cut up your turkey very fine; that is, cold roast, or boiled turkey. Put layers of turkey and oysters alternately. Season with cream, butter, pepper, salt, a little nutmeg, an onion, and strew breadcrumb and small pieces of butter on the top, and bake it. When the oysters are done, serve it."

Victoria Pudding—Boil two ounces of sage with six ounces of sugar in half a pint of water for three-quarters of an hour, add six ounces of fresh fruit, again boil for an hour, and then put it into a mold; let it stand until cold, when turn it out and pour a little syrup around the base. Milk may be eaten with it."

"Sally Lunn's.—One pound of flour, two eggs, one ounce of butter, one teaspoonful of milk, and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; first mix the baking-powder and flour, then add the eggs, which must be well beaten; the milk must be warmed, and the butter dissolved in it; then mix all together to a rather stiff dough; cut it into four pieces, which must be made into the shape of buns, and flattened with the hand. Put them into the oven at once, and bake for about twenty minutes. When removed from the oven, paint them over with a little egg and milk; butter, and serve them as you would crumpets."

Circus Christmas Greetings

Illinois was perched on an elephant's trunk and Bill Green of Kansas ballyhooed his greetings from a sideshow ticket booth. Joe Heiser of Texas held a midget clown, garbed in infant's dress, Robert D. Good of Pennsylvania posed in front of an old parade wagon, his circusesiana specialty; Dr. H. H. Conley silhouetted an elephant against his own photograph with a legend, "We never forget," and John J. Crowley was snapped on the Hunt Brothers Circus lot in front of an elaborately carved vehicle.

These represent but a few of the hundreds of ideas employed for attractive Christmas greetings by the circus profession and the fans, which the hobbyist with a wide acquaintanceship in circusdom is delighted to receive each holiday season.

Blossom

THE STATELY lady illustrated on the cover of this issue is "Blossom," a Dresden china doll more than 100 years old. She is one of the proud possessions of Donna N. Boudeman, Michigan doll collector. She is 24 inches tall, with ash blonde hair piled high on her head in front with two long loops of hair reaching her shoulders in the back. She has a spray of roses in her hair. Her neck is ornamented with a ruching and blue bow at the throat. Her shoulders are decorated in graduating colors from white to pink to deep rose. Both ruching and shoulders have raised scroll design trimming. The whole head, neck and shoulders are Dresden. She has long, slim Parian hands and arms and her Parian legs have white stockings with blue garters and high black shoes. Her body is cloth, stuffed with hair. Her waist is very slender but she has rather generous hips. Blossom has pierced ears and from them hang tiny, 24 carat gold earrings. She has large, blue eyes and delicate coloring. Her undergarments are exquisitely handmade but a little yellow with age. Her dress is of heavy pink satin trimmed with old rose velvet, edged with tiny rose and gold braid. She has a small ivory fan and a tiny lace handkerchief. Her original dress has been replaced as the old one was in tatters. She has won two first prize ribbons at doll shows.

Blossom's background is interesting which her present owner describes as follows:

"Blossom, originally from Dresden, Germany, is a centenarian. Her original name was Leisel, which means 'Gentle—Refined—A Lady—An Aristocrat.'

"About 1880 the doll was given by a fond grandmother to her little six year old granddaughter, Anna, who was sailing away from Germany to make her home in America, the land of opportunity.

"Leisel had been given to the grandmother as a wedding gift in 1840 and had always had a special place in a glass cabinet in her parlor. The little girl, Anna, had never been allowed previously, to play with the doll but she sat in front of the cabinet, in her grandparents' home, admiring the doll by the hour.

"Finally, Anna and her family arrived in New York and were met by her uncle, who had lived in America for some time. He greeted them with a bouquet of flowers and said, 'Here is a blossom for each of you. Keep it as a memento of your arrival into this great, new country.' Anna could not speak English but she repeated the word 'Blossom' over and over until she grew to love its sound. So she re-named the doll, her most precious possession, 'Blossom.' This word seemed to symbolize America to her and make the doll a part of it. Anna's family eventually settled in New Orleans, La., where Anna grew up and became a true American.

"I was in New Orleans in the winter of 1937-38 and that time I had been collecting dolls for about a year. I had quite a few dolls but not a single Dresden one. I searched and searched for one. Finally I met a charming French antique dealer and told her of my collection and my great desire to obtain a Dresden doll. She said she knew where there was such a doll but she doubted if the owner would sell it. Then on the very day I was scheduled to leave New Orleans, the dealer called and told me she had secured the Dresden doll. I was so excited I thought I would never reach her shop but I finally did and—there was Blossom. It was love at first sight and I don't believe I will ever be as thrilled again with any doll, as I was with Blossom.

"The woman, who had been the little Anna from Dresden, had no one to leave her precious doll to, so when she learned that I loved and appreciated old dolls enough to make a collection of them, she agreed to let me have her cherished Blossom, for she knew the doll would always be well preserved.

"That is how I purchased 'Blossom' who was the first Dresden lady of my collection. She has plenty of company now but she smiles serenely, knowing she will never be replaced in my affection."

Of course, Blossom, shares the spotlight with 400 or so other dolls in the Boudeman household. Mrs. Boudeman describes the development of her hobby, as follows:

"Until 1936, my only contact with antique shops and their owners was sitting in front of their shops in our car waiting while my husband browsed around by the hour, looking for Indian relics and firearms. It was hard for me to understand what he could possibly do in these shops for such a long time, but he seemed to get a huge kick out of it.

"He said I was missing a valuable experience by not having a hobby, so I started browsing around the shops with him and visiting antique shows. I enjoyed looking at the lovely old antiques but didn't see any particular thing that interested me enough to want to start collecting it, until we visited the Chicago Hobby Show in 1936. Then, to my surprise, I found the adorable old dolls caught my eye and I had a hard time passing a booth without examining these quaint toys of yesteryear.

"They seemed to smile a welcome to me, and plead with me to take them to my home and cherish them as they had once been loved and cherished in the long ago. One gay blonde, china doll with a Mae West figure seemed to challenge me to pass her by. I found myself returning to see her time and time again. Then, I remembered, I had my Mother's large china doll and the last doll which had delighted me when a child of nine, THIS DID IT. I bought Mae West and started collecting these fascinating old dolls. They seemed alive with personalities. I had been definitely bitten by the collecting bug. I started advertising for 'Dolls, 50 years or older' in our Kalamazoo newspaper and in the papers of several nearby towns. Those were the days before there were quite as many doll collectors, and I found answers to my advertisement coming in quite often. I'd jump into my car and dash off enthusiastically and quite often come home with a new member for my doll family. Antique dealers were helpful in securing them for me, too.

"I always enjoyed purchasing the dolls from their original owners best, because they could give me the doll's history. I always try to find out three things about each doll I purchase;—its age—who first owned it—and its original name. I catalog my dolls by name, and if I am unable to find out the doll's own name, I give her an old fashioned name, which seems to describe her.

"In the first year, I collected more than 100 dolls. I was practically broke most of the time that year.

"In due time I became acquainted with other doll collectors and learned which type they preferred and why. I learned which dolls were considered rare and which were less desirable. I believe I learned the most about the old dolls from the kindly advice of antique dealers who had booths at the famous Chicago Hobby Shows.

"It was hard for me to pass up any doll I could afford but I soon learned to choose specimens with greater care, and buy fewer and only the most unusual ones. Before I realized it I had more than 500 dolls and my space was becoming very limited, so I weeded out some of more common ones, and some duplicates and traded or sold them so that I now have about 400. Not all of mine are the rare type but a collection must have variations to be interesting.

"My favorites are the lovely Dresden, Parian and Bisque ladies with unusual hair dress, ruffs or ornaments about neck and head. My main trouble is that most doll collectors prefer these same type dolls. I believe the only reason is many of these exquisite, old dolls are found intact is the fact that this type doll was not given to children but to brides as a wedding gift. There was a sort of legend about them—As long as the doll remained unbroken the marriage would be a happy one.

"I have many people visit my home to see my doll family and it is always a great source of pleasure to show them to those who are really interested. During the past year, two of my most famous visitors have been the well known opera singer, James Melton and ZaSu Pitts of movie and stage fame."

mobile race followed, honors going to S. Dobbs, Conn., who drove his speedy 1906 Baker Electric. There were only two cars to enter the two-cylinder race, which was next on the schedule, and James Melton's 1905 Buick had only one cylinder operating. J. B. Van Sciver, Jr., who had the other two-cylinder car, disconnected one of the spark plugs on his Maxwell, to match, and piloted his car to victory.

Next came the exciting competitive tests for the big Racer and Speedster models. The outstanding racer, and winner of the "Most Interesting Car Contest" award, was the 1906 Locomobile Racer, belonging to Peter Helck of New York. It was driven in the same masterly fashion by the veteran Speedway racer, Joe Tracy, who drove it when it won the 1906 and 1907 Vanderbilt Cup Races. Peter Helck, the Esquire Magazine artist, has depicted this car as well as many other antique automobiles in recent issues of Esquire. The first prize went to the 1907 Mercedes belonging to George Waterman of the Belcourt Museum, and driven with great skill and brilliance by Charles Stich of New York. Ralph de Palma, the famous Speedway race king, piloted Mr. Melton's 1911 Mercedes Racer, another winner in the speed contests.

After the Grand Parade of all the antique and veteran cars, Mrs. Ira Warner, picturesque in an early motoring costume presented the prizes. The coveted "Concours d'Elegance" award, for the most elegant car in style, paint, brass, appearance and condition of entry, was won by Samuel E. Baily, Pennsylvania, against stiff competition, for his beautifully restored 1909 Pierce Arrow Miniature Tonneau touring car. Raymond Levis, of Annapolis, Maryland, who was accompanied by his 85-year-old father on the trip, captured the prize for the car covering the greatest distance in coming to the meet.

The first day closed with the official dinner of the Veteran Motor Car Club at Fairfield Hunt Club, which was followed by informal talks and movies of previous antique automobile meets and outings.

O'LEARY'S COW BUTTON

By LON TWAIN

The large pewter cow button illustrated in Button Classics on plate 84 is just a cow button, a button showing any static cow. The note given there cautiously states, "Mrs. O'Leary's Cow, named for the cow generally considered responsible—etc." But since publication of that volume a specimen has been discovered which more specifically depicts the bovine culprit of Chicago in action. Since we cannot say when or why the item was manufactured, we cannot give complete documentation for the purpose and subject of the button; however, the scene represented seem to fix the theme rather positively. This piece, so far the only one known, is loaned by favor of the museum of the Waterbury Button Company at Waterbury, Conn. Its source was a button-bag in Danvers, Mass. Behind this Yankee origin we cannot go; but we are expecting additional duplicates to be unearthed in the City of Big Beef. The body of the lamp and the fallen chimney have already been separated by the initial thrust of the posterior hoof of the cow; and the nervous lady is already poised for a second blow. The kind of lamp looks much more nearly correct than the rustic lantern shown in the film, "In Old Chicago," in which the cow kicked high to topple the light from a block of wood set against the boards of the stall. The kind of article in the Alice Brady accident looked a bit anachronistic for the object dated by Mrs. Patrick O'Leary in 1871.

It is not my purpose here to recount the story behind the "commemorative" button—which I hope it is—but rather to call the attention to what appears a significant historical specimen. Charles H. Coles, the Chicago octogenarian, has always insisted that when he reached the burning barn there was no evidence of the traditionally accepted cause of the flames. He has often told of seeing the blackened remains of the cow, of walking around the carcass, and of the absence of any lantern parts. He saw the cow-bell. But perhaps the lantern fragments flew farther than a running observer would see through smoke and farther than the perspective limits of a button design.

A New York Times editorial once remarked, "Is it possible that Mrs. O'Leary herself was secretly learning to smoke in that barn and then, when the catastrophe happened, just dumped the whole responsibility on poor, dead Bossy?"

Jacob Schaller, who recently died in Oak Park, (Chicago suburb), when he was a boy of nine years, delivered milk for the famous Mrs. O'Leary. His account of the start of the catastrophe, based on information given him the day following the fire by the owner herself, is regarded as the most authentic record available. We will not say that the artist who designed the button took too many liberties with history.

In "Lock, Stock, and Barrel, The Story of Collecting," by Douglas and Elizabeth Rigby, is the comment: "If several million Chicagoans would like to look upon the lamp that betrayed Mrs. O'Leary's cow, surely the most suitable of the city's public museums should possess that lamp (did it actually exist), for it has entered into the lives of the people as legend and their pleasure is in viewing an important symbol of their city's history." In accordance with this idea of the significance of objects associated with local history in appropriate museums, I would recommend that, immediately before the writer obtains the third O'Leary's Cow button on the market, the next one running loose should be corralled into the private museum of Mr. O. C. Lightner who gave the button hobby its initial boost and support

PAUL REVERE

A very interesting button has been brought to light recently by C. E. Braden, an Illinois collector. It is a one piece button about 1" in diameter designed by Paul Revere for General Washington in 1780. There were one hundred of them made. The mold is in the Boston Historical Museum which has authenticated the button.

BIG BUTTON STORY

Buttons got a half page story with a dozen or more illustrations in the New Orleans Sunday Times-Picayune recently. The story of the button mania was written by Maud O'Bryan Ronstrom, feature writer on that paper.

Biblical Reference

Can some button collector give me any information concerning a button which says, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth?" I know that it comes from the Book of Ecclesiastics, chapter 12, in the Bible. But what I want to know is when it was made, on what it was worn, and during what period. It is one-piece brass about the size of a dime, and the letters are raised. There is no trade mark, just five stars placed alternately around the back. The button is concave.

Mrs. Daniel Davis, Vermont

IDENTIFICATION

Doris B. Kendall, Massachusetts, has written HOBBIES regarding the button illustrated on page 29 of the October issue, and called "Minnehaha."

"The correct name for this button," writes Mrs. Kendall, "is 'The Pigeon's Bride,' from 'The Laughing Prince' by Filmore.

"On page 61 of this story you will find the exact picture as depicted on the button.

"It reads: ' . . . the Princess kissed its coral beak.'"

THE NEWEST SOCIETY

American "Buttonists" Have Organized for Historical Research—
Collecting Soldiers' Buttons from Famous Battlefields—
Some Recent Finds in New York.

From New York Times, Sunday, August 17, 1902

THE SOCIETY of American Buttonists, a remarkable society with a still more remarkable purpose, has just been organized. Its charter members are five in number, but they are men of mark in their parts of the world, even if the purpose for which they will hold annual meetings did not make them so. They are Col. Daniel Stevens of Bristol, R. I., President; W. L. Calver, 140 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, New York, Vice President, Reginald L. Hart, Wayne, Penn., Secretary; Louis F. Emilio, 29 West Forty-seventh Street, New York, historian, and Samuel Milne-Milne of Calverly House, Calverly, Leeds, England, foreign representative.

The purpose of the society is to supplement history by evidence contained in old buttons found on ancient and modern battlefields, but each member has his specialty and each possesses a museum that would delight the heart of an antiquarian. At the same time, facts of historical value have been unearthed by the members. The society expects soon to have a general field day, but in the meantime each member is delving in the battlefields of his respective section, gathering material for papers to be read at the first annual meeting.

W. L. Calver, who has a complete collection of buttons dropped from the uniforms of British soldiers on Manhattan Island during the Revolution, left yesterday for Niagara-on-the-Lake, where he will probe the site of Fort George. There is much of utilitarian value in the purpose of the society.

The President, Col. Daniel Stevens, who was a Captain in a Massachusetts regiment during the Civil war, has a general collection of buttons of the armies of every country in the world, with the single exception of Brazil. He has thousands of specimens, some of great beauty, and some very curious, particularly those of the soldiers of Java, Corea, and other Eastern countries. He even has buttons from the uniforms of the soldiers (there was only a handful in the army) of that defunct republic that existed for a short time high up in the Alps.

He has the original button mold belonging to the First Connecticut Regiment of the Revolution that was formed in Hartford. And let it be said that button molds are rare even if old spoon molds are plentiful.

The Vice President, W. L. Calver, as mentioned above, has a complete collection of buttons and other metal parts of uniforms which he has found on Manhattan battlefields. He has found buttons of every British regiment that ever served on the island. A short time ago these buttons were on exhibition in the Van Cortlandt Park Museum.

Mr. Calver owns the only specimens of buttons worn by Tory regiments except one of the King's American Regiment obtained in England of a curiosity dealer by Mr. Milne-Milne. Mr. Calver found his New York Volunteer buttons on the site of the Seventeenth Regiment camp, on what is now Prescott Avenue, in Inwood. He found buttons of the Volunteers of Ireland at Fort George. This was Lord Rawdon's regiment.

He found the only existing button of the Forty-sixth Regiment of Infantry. This find adds to the evidence of the inaccuracy of Gen. Washington's information at one period of the war. In his notebook Washington states that one of his spies, one "S. G., Sr.," had reported that the Forty-sixth Regiment had left New York with other troops on an expedition. Washington notes that this could not be so, as the Forty-sixth was a Burgoyne "convention" regiment and could not be in New York. It has since been found that the spy was right and Washington wrong. Now the finding of the button adds to the evidence of the spy.

Mr. Calver has the only existing button of the Forty-second Highlanders, who fought in the battle of Harlem; some of the Seventy-first, the most unfortunate British regiment of the war, which left Greenock, Scotland, with 2,100 men and surrendered at Yorktown with 300, and some of the historic Seventy-sixth.

The Secretary, Reginald L. Hart, started his museum by collecting Confederate buttons, of which he has some very rare specimens, particularly of the Confederate navy. Navy buttons are always scarce, no matter of what country. When they are discarded they are generally thrown overboard, whereas army buttons go with old uniforms to the camp refuse heap. In time the uniforms rot along with all organic matter, but the soil swallows the buttons and keeps them safe until a buttonist happens along and digs them up.

Of late, however, Mr. Hart has devoted himself to the war of 1812 period. He finds most of them on the Delaware, and he has buttons of every period of occupancy of old Fort Mifflin, below Philadelphia.

Historian Louis F. Emilio has a fine collection of early American buttons and some rare button molds. His collection of French buttons is particularly valuable, as it covers every period of the French army

THE BUTTON PARADE has more than 40
full pages of button illustrations, superbly drawn by hand, showing buttons which could be depicted in no other way. Facing each page is a description of the button designs for identification purposes.

Also contains chapters on Classification; Arrangement and Display; and an Illustrated Button Glossary of terms used in button collecting.

THE BUTTON STRING FOR YOUNG OR OLD!

By THELMA SHULL

A little girl and boy discover an old string of buttons in their grandmother's attic, and the story of their adventures continues throughout the book. Every page of rhymes is surrounded by a different border of buttons. Large, clear photographs of many specialized types, including one page of modern plastics. Any collector specializing in transportation, architecture, bird, cat, circus, farm, flower, head, music, seashore, coin, jet, Goodyear, calliope, or pearl buttons will want this book always at hand!

since numerical designations were used there on military buttons. The specimens antedate the French Revolution, and extend through the Napoleonic period and the Second Republic to the Second Empire. Mr. Emilio has also a large collection of British army buttons of various periods.

Mr. Milne-Milne is a military antiquarian and has a large collection of breastplates. He has a rare collection of British officers' buttons. He has written the history of several English regiments, and was assisted in his work by the findings of his American conferees, who by their collections were able to substantiate certain disputed facts. Some of these British regiments are very old. The members were greatly surprised to find buttons belonging to their soldiers of long ago in the possession of American antiquarians. Even the regimental museums, do not possess some of the specimens of ancient enery.

There has been no change in United States regimental buttons in fifty years. All regiments of the regular army wear the same buttons. It is so in England now and in France, but the Buttonist Society does not approve of the practice. Many regiments have had a glorious history, and a distinctive button found on a battlefield sometimes proves a marker for the historian.

Men buried in trenches are denied the only means of regimental detection when dug up in after times. The regular British soldier who died on the veldt leaves no mark to be resurrected with his bones, whereas when the bodies of the soldiers of the Ninth United States Infantry who fell at Lundy's Lane during the war of 1812, were dug up last year and reinterred with pomp and ceremony. The only marks of identification found with the bodies were the buttons that had once bedecked their uniforms.

RHODE ISLAND

The following officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Rhode Island State Button Society held recently: Grace E. Borden, President; Edwin J. Loucks, Vice-President; Edith Barnard, Secretary; Mrs. Irving K. White, Treasurer; George E. Adams, Member-at-Large. The committee chairmen appointed at the meeting were: Mrs. Marguerite A. Adams, Information; Frederick A. Hawsley, Membership; Miss Florence P. Edgers, Publicity.

KANSAS

The Kansas State Button Society, during its 5th annual meeting held recently in Wichita, elected the following officers for the coming year: Mrs. H. L. Scales, President; Mrs. Jno. Engert, Vice-President; Mrs. Ella Russell, Secretary; Mrs. Elmer Higgs, Treasurer. Mrs. Scales will also serve again as editor of the Kansas Bulletin.

This meeting, was highlighted by the display of three hundred trays of buttons. Included among them, and especially noted for their beauty, were two trays received from members in California.

The retiring president, Dr. Cohen, was given much praise at the meeting for his fine leadership. The society's next meeting will be held at Newton next May.

BOOKS RECEIVED

Good Club Book

"Educators Guide to Free Films" is a book that ought to be in the hands of every hobby club. It lists hundreds of films that are furnished free by various Government agencies, private businesses, and agencies of different kinds for use in club work. It is published by the Educators Progress Service at Randolph, Wisc.

Biography

One of the most readable books that has come to our desk for review is "The Man From Missouri" authored by Cyril Clemens, a cousin of Mark Twain. It tells the life story of the boy who grew up in Missouri and later became President of the United States. Most such books, which are designed to ride on a popular wave, are amateurish from every angle, but here is one written by a recognized author who knows how to put his story together and has embodied human interest on every page. The book is published at $2 by the Webster News Times of Webster Grove, Missouri.

PRINTING BOOK

"The Practice of Printing" is a new book just off the press of the Manual Arts Press of Peoria, Ill., authored by Ralph W. Polk, Supervisor of Printing Instruction in the Detroit Public Schools. This book is not only a great help to beginners in printing but also to those who study typography, type faces, make-up of advertising, mechanical processes of the different kinds of printing, etc. Even those who have no idea of learning the printing trade can obtain information that the average layman ought to know by reading this book.

KNOTS

Tying knots is probably a hobby with quite a few people, since they started it in their Boy Scout years. A collection of them would not be bad at all.

"Handbook of Knots" by Raoul Graumont is just out, cloth bound at $1.75. It contains 43 plates showing 428 different knots. The book is published by the Cornell Maritime Press of New York City.

SILVER FOR CHRISTMAS

FAMOUS LINCOLN LOG CABIN

Its Mysterious Fate

By ELEANOR GRIDLEY

Published Posthumously

Part VII

I was very unhappy, fairly wretched, and concluded to delay the report, as perhaps I could make different arrangements. And, so in the meantime I felt the urge to look in upon the cabin material once more.

What had happened? I am either blind or crazy," I exclaimed. There was not a vestige of the cabin to be seen in its accustomed place. Dazed, wretched, bewildered I could not think sanely. Suddenly, I remembered the rumor I had so persistently disputed and concluded to await developments.

Again I heard the rumor and denied its truth, but I could not longer feel uncertain, I must know, and so I called on Mr. Gunther, who received me in his usual cordial and courteous manner. Scarcely heeding the customary greetings, I plunged into the subject matter and said, excitedly, "And so the Lincoln log cabin has sailed away to foreign ports," although I assumed a sarcastic tone of voice it broke, for a moment only, then I continued, "To a European city of art and culture, I am told. Is this true?"

I did not wait for Mr. Gunther's affirmation nor his denial, but continued my harangue. "How wonderful," I exclaimed, "that people of other lands may have the privilege of viewing Abraham Lincoln's humble home while those of his native land are denied this pleasure. Pausing a moment to gather courage, I asked rather humbly, "Is this true?" Mr. Gunther, also paused a moment, then quietly replied, "You are mistaken."

Mr. Gunther's apparent gesture of dismissal did not disturb me. I tarried and asked, as calmly as Mr. Gunther had replied, "What has become of the Lincoln log cabin?" His voice though firm carried a tone of sympathy. "I do not know," he answered.

We, Mr. Gunther and I, clasped hands, and although I saw him many times afterwards we never alluded to the painful subject.

The story of the famous log cabin is not a romance. It is a true narrative; nay, more, it is an Epic—an historic tragedy.

Let us briefly review its history. Amidst a virgin forest it stood—the home of humble folk, hewers of wood and drawers of water. Among them was one of royal birth, but as such they knew him not.

One day from the portal of this rude dwelling, went forth that dweller. He longed to breathe the air of the outside world and to taste the ripened fruit of the tree of knowledge.

The existence of this log cabin was of long duration. An existence dull, dreary, monotonous, circumscribed, yet sometimes alight with the coming—the return of the pilgrim, who came to assist and comfort the kind old stepmother, who had been his friend from early youth, and his aging father.

To-day the fame of that former humble cabin dweller—Abraham Lincoln—is more universally acclaimed than that of any monarch, great or mighty.

That staunch old cabin tarried until it was quite asleep, when suddenly it awoke to find it had attained fame. Strange and stirring events were transpiring. It had become an object of interest, of historic importance.

Craftsmen and laborers came to ply their intent. The staunch old weather-beaten log cabin did not resist their undertaking. The cabin's entire composition—every particular—was displaced and carefully deposited on vehicles that the iron-horse bore swiftly away across the land to the City on the Lake, where it was reassembled, to await with joyful anticipation further removal—an honored setting midst the domes and palaces of the Enchanted White City—an impressive object-lesson for the whole world to view.

One day, from a clear sky, a hissing, stinging bolt descended. Crashing, crushing it wrought its destruction.

The Lincoln log cabin, the famous log cabin, was disowned, insulted, rejected. Who was the arrogant despot that had issued the imperious mandate.

Let us submit a few pertinent questions. Who will answer them?

Would the exhibition of Abraham Lincoln's dwelling place have violated the peerless man's fame? Would such an exhibition have tarnished his name? Would such a log cabin display have disgraced his descendants?

Who was it that entertained such insipid ideas? Did anyone? Who was it that failed to estimate the value—the spiritual value—that such an impressive object-lesson would have afforded? Who was it that lacked understanding? Who was it that robbed the youth of so profound an example—an example that demonstrated man's ability to overcome adversity and obstacles that seemed unsurmountable—man's ability to achieve? Who was it that failed to comprehend the incentive so impressive an illustration would have evoked—the youth's desire to emulate the life of the man whom the Nation had chosen—its leader. The Chieftain, never faltering, despite tribulation, calumny, and personal insult that many a man would have tottered under and gone down to defeat—he led his people on to victory—the preservation of the Union, forever and inseparable.

Who was it that rejected the famous log cabin? Who was it that ordered so arrogant a decree? Who was it that issued the imperious mandate—"Begone thou insolent intruder?"

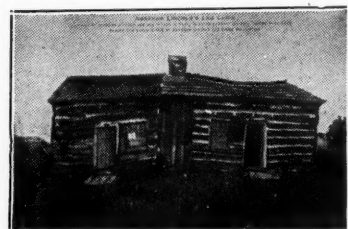

Someday, perhaps, one who knows will answer all of the questions I have enumerated.

"The mills of the Gods grind slow but exceedingly fine." Thus may the irony of Fate reveal the naked truth.

The Famous Lincoln Log Cabin

The story of the fate of this historical building remains one of the great mystery stories of all time. Summarily, it was removed from its original setting in Coles County, Illinois, for the Columbian Exposition in Chicago, in 1893. After a succession of events, the entire cabin disappeared most mysteriously and to this day the facts of its departure and whereabouts have never been solved. Mrs. Gridley, a lifelong student and collector of Lincolniana, who wrote this story from her own experiences, long pondered the mystery of the cabin's disappearance, and although she had arrived at her own conclusions, she could never substantiate them. Perhaps sometime, somewhere, the mystery will be solved.

Death of Otto Bernet

The recent death of Otto Bernet, vice-president and a director of the Parke-Bernet Galleries, has taken from art circles and the field of auctioneering one of the most prominent figures of our time.

Mr. Bernet's career began shortly after arriving in this country from Switzerland, where he was born in 1881. His first position was as office boy with the American Art Association, during which time he undertook the study of voice culture and public speaking, using the work of his superior, Thomas E. Kirby, as a model. This procedure paid him good dividends, for it seems one day Mr. Kirby became too ill to handle an important sale, whereupon Mr. Bernet stepped in to fill the gap, and was an immediate success. This showing brought further opportunities to display his ability, and in time Mr. Bernet officiated regularly for the American Art Association and later for its successor, the Parke-Bernet Galleries.

GOODWILL INDUSTRIES

If a survey could be made of the people who have the collecting habit, or, more to the point, why they collect, it probably would be safe to assume that a good percentage would be found to be persons physically handicapped, and who, through hobbies, manage to find a channel into which they divert their curtailed energy. In recognition of this fact, HOBBIES magazine is happy to be able, from time to time, to give a report on some of the organizations throughout the country which have been founded to aid these handicapped people.

One of these organizations is the Goodwill Industries, founded in Boston a half-century ago. Each day Goodwill trucks circulate in all the large cities gathering unused cast-off articles of clothing, furniture, etc., donated by the people, and bring these articles to the Goodwill Industries.

Most of the material contributed is second hand clothing, material, etc., but often good antiques are contributed so that collectors and dealers have learned to drop in on their buying rounds. Some splendid pieces of antique furniture are found. They often need repairing and restoring which is done by cripples, handicapped, and retarded persons. Some of them are part-time workers.

At present there are eighty-nine Goodwill Industries units in the country.

Summertime, Norman, and Lahore Patterns of Semi-Porcelain

By THELMA SHULL

THREE transfer-printed patterns of semi-porcelain sent to the United States from England about seventy years ago are shown in the illustration, the Norman, the Lahore, and Summertime. They represent just three of the dozens of patterns of brown-decorated tableware imported by American wholesalers and retailers of china and pottery for the local market. Each piece in the Summertime pattern is decorated with butterflies and a spray of wheat. These are motifs that symbolize the summer season, and the pattern seems appropriately named. The cream pitcher, illustrated, is an example of this design. The plates and platters are very attractive with large sprays of wheat arranged gracefully across the right side and several butterflies placed at just the right spots to balance the design.

It was made in bowls of many sizes that fitted one within the other, from a very small one  $3\frac{1}{2} \times 4$  to the very large cracker bowl. It was made in butter pats  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches in diameter, compote, cream pitcher, oblong covered tureen, and 10 inch and 7 inch plates, to mention only a few of the many items.

This pattern was made by T. and R. Boote, a firm located at Burslem, England. They purchased the Waterloo Potteries in that town in 1850, and were known as a very progressive establishment. In 1853 they took out a patent for mosaic work, and in 1857 another patent was granted to them for an ornamental pottery which they developed. They made fine tiles of Majolica, and other kinds also. They made semi-porcelain, too, with the durable qualities of ironstone china but without its heaviness and thickness.

Summertime is one of these patterns of semi-porcelain. It was registered in 1878. Another is the Lahore pattern, registered in the patent office two years later by the Messrs. Boote. This is a purely conventional design of leaves and flowers. A botanist might discern a likeness between these conventionalized forms and the native plants of India. For it was undoubtedly India that gave this pattern its name. The bowl on the left in the illustration is an example of the Lahore pattern. In Punjab, British India, there is a division, a district, and a city all named Lahore. The British successfully fought against the Sikhs and occupied the city in 1846. This tableware pattern probably commemorated or was named after the British victory.

On the larger pieces the dainty brown design shows off to better advantage. The classic arrangement of fern sprays and the scrolled and frilly petals form a wide border around each piece. Handles are simulated coils of rope, a pleasing part of many early patterns. This was made in a complete set including oblong bowls, oval-shaped vegetable tureen, large soup tureen with ladle, plates, platters, cups and saucers, etc.

Another important Burslem pottery, besides T. and R. Boote, was Burgess and Leigh. It was named for its founders, Mr. R. F. Burgess and William Leigh. In 1867 they moved from the High Street Works to the Hill Top Works, where the firm was still located in 1900. The mark of this firm is a beehive with sprays of flowers on either side and the words Hill Pottery with B and H printed on the ribbon.

Among their productions was the pattern of tableware called Norman, which obviously takes its name from the Norman Tower which appears prominently on each piece. The large oval platter pictured here is one of the pieces in this pattern. The spray of leaves and flowers helps to cover the background and adds the floral touch that was a part of the majority of these brown-toned patterns printed on an ivory background. The platter measures 10 $\frac{1}{2}$  by 13 inches.

The three patterns illustrated were all made in complete table services, and complete sets at that time usually had more pieces than modern sets. While a hundred-piece set of china is now considered fairly complete, in olden days sets were often advertised with one hundred and thirty pieces. And when one considers that there were butter chips, oatmeal bowls, usually two sizes of cups, open compotes and covered tureens, and the other usual articles still included in the average table service it is easy to see why a set consisted of so many different items.

This is perhaps one reason why many people enjoy forming sets of this old ware. Not only is it dated with the code initial designating the year the design was patented, but there were so many different sizes and shapes of dishes made that it is a delight to the hostess when she uses it on the table.

Gearhart's*— ANTIQUE SHOP — 519 PLANK ROAD — ALTOONA, PENN.

Have you seen a Victorian Bellows Rocker? We have one. Three roses large spray created in garland on serpentine bowed back, dainty corset back running to front combining arms and back. Upholstered back and seat, bowed front with carved roses, 4 legs, 2 front ones carved and bowed. Legs attached to platform, which is formed to likeness of chair; front and back has heavy coil spring. Upper chair rocks on lower platform and upholstering covers both pieces in manner making bellows rocker. Small, graceful chair, same size as regular lady's chair. Most unusual. $150 created. Usable con.

Chippendale Lowboy, mahogany, duck feet, long drawer and 2 small drawers in front; brass handles. Good usable condition except 2 chips off 1 drawer in front; rest at all bad. This is a real early one and a real bargain at $375. crated.
2 Cherry corner cupboards, solid doors above and below, nice shapely ones, med. size, good rough condition. One 8 1/2x16", two pc. with drawer $75. $142" one pc. $75 crated. Walnut corner cupboard, 90" high, 46" wide, nice shapely one, good rough condition $85 crated.
6 Leg cherry drop leaf table, 19", leaves 20", center 47" long, 58" open. Turned legs, structurally good; needs refinishing $40.
Pair mahogany and cherry hex corner, turned legs, banquet tables, extension table attachment has been added to make regular extension type, drop-leaves removed board inserts in middle. $100.00 crated.

Genuine oak Tudor blanket chest, 50" long, 16" deep, 20" high, solid ends, bracket feet, elaborately carved front. Good usable condition. This piece will add grace and atmosphere to any home. $150 crated.
Iron Safe, 22x22x32, combination, etc. $75 crated.
Handsomely refinished, natural solid walnut wash bowl stand, top 16 1/2x16" with dovetailed side boards, beautifully turned legs, nice drawer on top, shelf below, 45" high, rich old walnut original. $37.50 crated.

Soft wood Blanket Chest, 34" long, 16" deep, 22" high, turnip feet, expertly refinished in mahogany, graceful and beautiful. $35 crated.
The nicest cherry, drop-leaf table I ever saw: 6 legs, nicely turned, 45" long, 23" leaves, 21" center, 66" open, 28 1/2" high; beautifully refinished, natural cherry. A genuine old masterpiece. Crated $135.
Another nicely refinished table, 6 legs nicely turned, 40" long, 20" leaves, 19" center, 58" open, 29" high. Beautiful cherry piece. $100 crated.

Old Wine Cabinet, 58" wide overall, center cabinet 30" wide, drawer above, 1 door below, reeded pillar offsets on each side, front handsomely

"THE SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE"

THERE IS probably no more interesting character material anywhere than the Jenny Lind. There is not an over abundance of this type, but enough to lure the hopeful collector onward. The paper dolls, dolls and figurines illustrated here are association pieces that any doll collector would prize. They are part of an interesting collection of varied material relating to the great Swedish soprano whose popularity swept the nation under P. T. Barnum's aegis in 1850. The collection will be exhibited at The New-York, N. Y., Historical Society, through December 31st, according to R. W. G. Vail, Director.

This collection—the life work of Jenny Lind's most ardent researcher, Leonidas Westervelt, New York, and now a permanent possession of the Historical Society—reveals many interesting facets to the career and character of the "Swedish Nightingale."

For instance, there is the fabulous contract by which Barnum guaranteed $187,500 for the concert tour, which opened in Castle Garden (later the Aquarium), Battery Park, New York City, September 11, 1850.

Among more than 250 likenesses of the singer, in almost every medium of mid-19th-century portraiture, the little daguerreotype of Jenny and her fiancé, Otto Goldschmidt, shortly before their marriage in Boston, 1852, recalls the interesting fact that the minister who assisted at the wedding was the Reverend Jonathan M. Wainright, great-grandfather of the hero of Corregidor.

A chain of interests led Mr. Westervelt to the lady of his collector's heart. When the young enthusiast read with awe while a Columbia College drama student, Barnum had guaranteed the unheard-of sum of $187,500 to bring some Swedish singer over for a concert tour he knew he had found the subject for his collection. "Who was this Jenny Lind that she would be worth risking a fortune on?" he asked himself. "What was she like?" For more than forty years Leonidas Westervelt has been collecting the materials for an answer.

There are the items which connect her with Barnum: The fabulous contract; the correspondence, including Jenny's letter "in favor of having lower prices to my concerts" and Barnum's reply; Bayard Taylor's autograph original of the Two-Hundred-Dollar Prize Song; samples of Jenny's first Castle Garden costume; a lithograph of the side-wheel steamer Atlantic that brought her over; and many other fascinating pieces.

The enamored collector found more than a dozen other equally rewarding avenues of approach to his collection of Lindiana—and followed them when need be to the far corners of the world. For instance: There are the Jenny Lind portraits—more than 250 of them: miniatures, lithographs, daguerreotypes, sculptured busts, even an engraving of her (picked up with other memorabilia of her honeymoon at Northampton, Mass.) with a border showing the amounts of her American charities. [Barnum had banked on "her character for extraordinary benevolence and generosity" as her way to the heart, and his to the purse, of "the American public."] Then there are the tickets, programs, clippings, etc., of her concerts, including the rare Havana program of 1851. There are books from her library such as her Bible autographed on the New Testament title page and her copy of Uzen's Lyrische Gedichte presented by Mendelssohn. There is a profusion of Jenny Lind music—manuscript, sheet, bound—music sung by the "Nightingale" herself, or dedicated to her, or named for her: "Jenny Lind's Operatic Songs," "Jenny Lind's Ballads," "Jenny Lind's Fashionable Songster," "Jenny Lind's Note Book," etc. And of course there is a collection of her personal belongings—intimate objects still redolent of the captivating personality which inspired men to bid hundreds of dollars for first choice of seats at her concerts and queens to break precedent by tossing bouquets to her; and whole categories of mementos or manufactures showing her likeness or her name—snuff boxes, toys, buttons, clay pipes, china figurines (including the set of Jenny and Mendelssohn), candle-snuffers, trout flies, Staffordshireware, paper weights, cigar box covers, "schnapps" bottles, doorstops, even a parlor stove with her name and the date 1852 cast in the iron, and of course, dolls.

Wherever the "Nightingale" had sung, or danced, or honeymooned, studied or taught her art, lived or, at last died—there went Leonidas Westvelt, and invariably found something to reward his search; a gold handkerchief ring presented from her finger to a lady admirer at the masked ball in her honor at the old New Orleans Theater; or the "Diffidence" found in Blue Point, Long Island, and its companion "Confidence" in London; or the various Jenny Lind medals, in Sweden, England, Austria, Germany [—Mr. Westervelt himself received the Royal Music Academy's Jenny Lind Medal (1943) for his outstanding contribution to Lindiana]; and finally, from the diva's own daughter, the late Mrs. Raymond Maude of London; Jenny's gold locket, a wedding present, containing portraits of two Americans she most admired—George Washington and Daniel Webster [Webster also admired Jenny and one of his letters to her is in the collection]; her personal seal of ivory and gold, decorated with her initials and a dainty lyre; and a practice music sheet in Jenny's hand with penciled corrections by her husband.

Probably no Jenny Lind doll is more worthy of the name than the one shown in this collection. However, some splendid other Jenny Lind dolls exist, and the rewards, in general, for the Jenny Lind enthusiast seem hopeful.

The More You Know, the Better You Buy

By FRANK FARRINGTON

WHAT WE don't know, so they say, won't hurt us. As in the case of most old sayings, that one is about as accurate as "two and two make five." What we don't know about glass, as collectors of glass in one form or another, will empty our pocketbooks, hurt our pride and it may even cut our fingers.

Anybody collecting anything hates to find, on getting his purchases home, that it is an imitation, a reproduction or a valueless maverick. Paying good money for glass that has no value other than its household utility value is no part of the collector's plan. He pays too much and is out money. He shows his purchase to his friends who know more than he and is rated a sucker. He rubs his hands fondly over his rough-edged piece and cuts his fingers. He is out of luck all around because he depends upon his own knowledge of something he knows too little about.

I am not here going to attempt to supply rules that will make it simple for the beginner to recognize old glass, rare glass, Pittsburg, South Jersey or Sandwich glass at sight. I know of no simple set of rules that can be depended upon to operate with 100 per cent accuracy like the rules of arithmetic applied by a computing machine. No matter how much one studies or observes, the factor of judgment will enter into most decisions. One just has to develop some of that sort of second-sight that gives him a nudge and whispers, "Lay off that piece. There's something phony about." But that second-sight can be acquired. In fact no one is born with it.

Where does glass get the names; flint glass, lead glass, green glass, crystal glass, pressed glass, Sandwich glass, lacy Sandwich, Venetian or Bohemian glass, window glass, plate glass, cut glass?

Passing up window glass, plate glass, cut glass, which terms are familiar, let's take a look at the other terms.

Sandwich glass, it is easy to understand, is glass that was made at the Sandwich factory on Cape Cod. This was under the management of Deming Jarves who started the works in 1825 and closed them down for good in 1858 following a disagreement with his employees. He told them that if the fires were allowed to go out, he would never start them again and he kept his word and that was that!

Sandwich glass was given its lacy effect by fine stippling of the pattern and today lacy Sandwich is one glass admired by everyone and worth buying even though it may be chipped. So important have the cupplates become, in Sandwich, Pittsburg and other makes, that collectors vie for their possession. The variety of known patterns runs to about 850, all of which are carefully identified and numbered by the recognized authority, Albert C. Marble, whose numbers are used in referring to specific patterns. All lacy Sandwich glass is valued by collectors, even by those who do not feel able to make its collection their hobby.

Green glass is a coarse bottle glass in olive green, olive amber, or aquamarine. It was used in making the early American flasks to which George McKearin and other authorities give so much attention in describing in detail the patterns showing Lafayette, Kossuth, Jenny Lind, Jackson, Harrison, Franklin, Taylor and George Washington, together with others of our historic ancestry. This green glass is a crude silicate of lime and soda and gets its color not artificially, but from natural impurities in the raw material—iron and other metals. Many containers were made of some grade of green glass, from the great wicker-bound demijohns to the finger sized Haarlem Oil bottles.

It may be said here that, chemically speaking, glass is a combination of two oxides (from the four, soda, potash, lime, lead), fused with silicate from glass sand or from quartz. Naturally the quality of the glass is influenced by the quality of sand available for its manufacture. Hence glass works, particularly when transportation was a serious problem, were located near such sand sources as Berkshire county, Mass., South Jersey, Juniata county, Penna., or Hancock county, W. Va.

Collectors who have learned something about glass qualities, talk of flint glass, thinking, perhaps, of the early glass made, as the best of English glass formerly was, from flints calcined and ground, and it is the flint base to which they attribute the ringing sound when struck. This resonant musical tone, however, is really due to the lead oxide used in its production. It is this lead oxide, too, that gives that old glass its brilliancy and its weight. By increasing the proportion of lead oxide in the glass it becomes what is called "strass," used in making artificial gems.

More recently American utility glass for domestic or chemical and medical purposes has been made with silicates of lime and soda instead of with oxide of lead. The name, "flint," has persisted, due to the desire to use a name that in the early history of glass making stood for the best glass. Calcined flints ceased to be used long ago and were supplanted by natural silicate glass sand, silicon dioxide.

A few early American glass manufacturers, Stiegel, for instance, made both the lead ("flint") glass and the soda-lime glass, selling the latter in the form of medicine bottles, enameled flip glasses and mugs.

Pressed glass, the pattern glass recently so widely collected, is a modern glass without the lead content and without the ring that goes with the old lead. This glass, dating back thirty to sixty years, is sometimes called "flint" glass, but it has no just claim to the name.

Pressing glass produces a product that is just what its name indicates, glass poured into a mold and pressed firmly into position, to take all the indentations of the inside of the mold. (Occasionally a piece occurs with an edge incomplete and smooth because the molten glass did not get clear into the recess of the mold pattern). If the mold is open at the top, so the molded piece of glass can be taken out when hardened, the mold will be in one piece. If the mold is smaller at the top, so the finished glass could not be removed whole, the mold provided is then in two or more parts, so hinged as to permit it to be opened up to permit the removal of the glass.

The pieces of the mold, particularly when worn as a wooden mold may well be, may not fit so tightly together as to keep the joints from leaving little ridges on the molded piece. The resulting "mold marks" will be due to the molten glass working into the crevices between the parts of the mold. Many glass collectors judge the glass by its mold marks and it is common comment that such and such a piece is better because it has three mold marks rather than two or none. It might even have four. Informed collectors use the reference to "three-mold glass," for example, only in referring to glass pieces blown (not poured) into the hinged mold, "blown three-mold glass." The presence of three or four mold-marks is not of itself any evidence of greater value.

Venetian glass was made by the Venetians of the island town of Murano, a mile from Venice. It was thin, delicate, too light for cutting, but ductile, and designs were made with long, drawn out slender wires of the material. Ornamentation was in the form of crimped and ruffled flutings and airy, wing-like forms, combined with beautiful thin clear glass, not, however, of the quality of English lead glass.

Examples of Venetian glass comprised frosted glass, crackled glass, millifiori (frequently in the form of paper-weights), filigree effects (lace-like), "aventurine" with flecks of dust-like gold, thread-glass with tiny white or colored threads running through it. There were many types of drinking glasses with Venetian bowls on stems of fascinating designs. Venetian glass colors run through the chromatic scale, with yellow, green, red, blue, pink, amber, opal, rose, azure, in all shades. Venetian glass was light and airy in effect. The workers of Murano made every kind of household glass for use or ornament and the product was the fashion in Europe in the 15th century.

Bohemian glass came to popularity in the 16th century to rival Venetian glass, when new methods were applied in the production of Bohemian which had previously been a greenish glass ornamented with colored enamels.

In order to carry out the new methods in Bohemian, involving some cutting, a heavier glass than the original was needed and the improved was almost like rock-crystal, due to an increased potash content. Then came the beautiful etching and engraving, with designs showing trees, flowers, people, scenes, coats-of-arms, stag pictures. These might be made with an etching needle and sometimes on topaz glass. Ruby and emerald and white Bohemian glass came along in due time, about 1750, and 100 years later there was the Bohemian we find now in dressing table sets, wine glasses and decanters, powder and puff boxes, cologne bottles, etc. These are found in the ruby and white, green and white, blue and white and red, green or blue with gold.

The varieties of glass are limitless and even the varieties known to most glass hobbyists are so numerous as to confuse anyone who tries to learn them all.

Experiences in Collecting

THROUGH THE years, my sister and I have had many interesting antiquing adventures together. By helping people (friends and acquaintances) rummage into old cupboards and trunks we have often emerged with an accumulation of the dirt of the ages up to our elbows, triumphantly bringing forth something sparkling, that is to say, we have found it sparkles after several thorough scrubblings in warm soapy water. Sometimes we are fortunate enough to be able to buy these treasures of the past, but many times we see them replaced into their dusty resting places because the owner is unwilling, quote, to "depart from" them because they were a gift from someone long since dead.

Many of the more laughable experiences can not be publicly told at the present day, though possibly when time has mellowed many memories and some of our older friends have gone, if time and ability permits, I should like to collect them in book form which might be enjoyed by people who, like us, are always interested in anything pertaining to antiques.

A short time before last Christmas I called on one of the older citizens of our little town, and she sold me some odds and ends of old jewelry at a moderate price. When I got home I examined the contents more thoroughly and found most of the pieces rather nondescript but there was one very pretty breast-pin, with the catch broken. It was about the size of a quarter, the center stone a small opal with a sunburst of tiny pearls leading out from the center; the whole pin on a background of yellow gold.

My sister admired this pin very much, so I had the catch repaired, a safety catch added and the pin cleaned and polished, and gave it to her as a Christmas gift. One of the first times that she wore it, a very good friend of hers noticed the pin and immediately wanted to know just where she had gotten it. My sister told her it was a gift but did not give her the particulars as to its origin. Finally, the friend told her the reason for her unusual interest in it was the fact that she had owned a pin exactly like this one many years ago when she was a student at Logan College (a school that was in our town, but has been closed for a number of years). It seems that she went home for a week-end, and in the hurry of her departure she left the pin on her dresser in her room at school. When she returned the pin had disappeared and she was never able to find any trace of it.

When my sister told me the story I immediately remembered that the old woman had remarked during my visit with her, that for more than 20 years she worked as a maid at Logan College.

I make no accusation as to how it came into her hands, but my sister agreed with me in my conclusions. So she is planning to return the pin, feeling that its homecoming will be well received after its 30 years' absence.—Mrs. H. L. Bush, Kentucky.

Old Steeple Clock

By CARL MORTON

Religious in conception and design,
Of Puritan simplicity and grace,
Thy decorations crude yet somehow fine,
And strength of wisdom written in thy face;
Of woods those which came closest to man's hand,
Nor did these matters as you took your shape,
What mattered was that, over all our land,
You cotton mostly to folks on "The Cape."
Thy tick, mindful of our sturdy mind,
Though labored, seems to be destined to last.

Regarding Packing

Mrs. Alice Brewster is another who has been commended for her manner of packing glass. As stated in previous items in this department, the packing of glass deserves careful consideration, for once choice specimens are broken, they are not replaceable either with money or effort.

Mrs. Brewster submitted merchandise to a collector, and received the following letter:

"The pickle jars arrived today, and we want to express to you our appreciation for the careful and intelligent manner in which they were packed.

"If all dealers would take the precaution to pack in this manner, they would certainly make friends and increase their business."

A Meissen Vase

THE CLEVELAND Museum of Art has just purchased some fine French XVIII Century soft paste porcelain objects and one German, hard porcelain piece of about the same time, through its J. H. Wade Fund. They were formerly in the collection of the late Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan.

The French objects number eight, two seaux or jardinières, a covered bowl and a five-piece cabaret teaset.

Fine China was one of the desired luxuries of the nobility in the France of the Louis, who imported it extensively from China where it was made exclusively.

Inspired and backed by Madame Pompadour a pottery was started at Rouen for the purpose of making it at home, but the French could never discover how to make the hard, bright porcelain of China. In their efforts, however, they finally achieved a soft-paste porcelain, fragile but with a waxy flowerlike beauty characteristically its own, as in these new Cleveland pieces.

The German pieces are two covered urns or vases. They were made at the historic Meissen factory in Germany, where the secret of hard paste porcelain was finally discovered for the western world. Augustus The Strong, King of Poland and Elector of Saxony, there had put the leading alchemist of the time under lock and key, surrounded by apparatus and materials, with the ultimatum to discover how to make gold. Naturally, he was not successful, but the much desired porcelain which he turned out saved him. These vases are dated 1749, their rococo decoration includes an overall pattern of blue and white forget-me-nots in relief surrounding cartouche reserves, on opposite sides of scenes with figures of ladies and gentlemen of the period. The Meissen Factory's emblem, blue, crossed swords are a part of the design and from the date the pieces were made during the time when Johann Joachim Kändler, famous modeler, was working in the porcelain factory.

Covered Meissen Vase, mid 18th Century

THE PRACTICAL BOOK OF ORIENTAL RUGS

By G. GRIFFIN LEWIS

The foremost authority on the subject of Oriental rugs tells in this handsome and completely new edition how to identify and know rugs, how to buy them and what to buy, how to ascertain their approximate cost, and how to take care of them. In addition, Dr.
Lewis tells the fascinating story of rug weaving, rug designs and their symbolism.

Red Cross Girls

Discover German Collections

MUNICH, GERMANY—American Red Cross girls open a club in the famous Burgerbrau Keller ("citizens' beer hall") in Munich, Germany, where Hitler staged the "beer-hall Putsch" in 1923! Exploring the cellar, the girls discovered these beer steins, an enormous collection of pins given the German people and a real prize—Hitler's family tree that shows the name of Adolph Hitler entwined in ivy at the top of the tree. Standing (left to right): CPL. JOHN MILLER, Mansfield, Ohio, and SGT. CHARLES ZIMNOWSKI, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Seated, JANE SNODGRASS WOUTERS, Collinsville, Ill. and ROBERTA PEAY, Columbia, S.C.

Have You Ever Noticed

that we advertise to buy and not to sell? For years we have been buying heavily from scouts and collectors who have answered our advertisements in Hobbies. We want all items in really old colored glass and milk glass, also choice pattern glass as per Lee & McKearin, lacy Sandwich, fine paperweights, Sunderland lustre, fine china, silver, student lamps, fine clocks, etc.

If you are finding good antiques, write to us; we want them. We will send a check by return air mail for proof and authentic pieces priced for resale.

Victorian Glass! Early American Pressed Glass!

Authoritative, up-to-date volumes on the MUST list for collectors of American glass. Standard reference books in use by libraries, collectors and dealers.

EARLY AMERICAN PRESSED GLASS was first published in December 1931. Since then it has seen revised and gone through eighteen printings. The nineteenth edition has been revised a second time and appears with all new type and Plates. A few additional illustrations have been added. In order to save paper, the book contains 698 pages, though it would run 800 with the same size page and type as were used in the first edition. Many reservations have accumulated in our files while this book has been out of print. The new 19th edition will be ready in ample time for Christmas. Stating publication dates during wartime has been hazardous due to shortage of skilled labor. According to latest reports, the reservations should be in the mail by December first .....$10.00

While we are at the sordid business of punishing war criminals, let us punish our own. If there were any war criminals developed from the recent unpleasantness, they are the birds who were selling American junk to the Japs to be cut up into shrapnel to wound and kill our men. Even after we committed an act of war by tying up the money and property of Japanese citizens, that traffic continued. Even after we issued an ultimatum that if they did not get out of China or if they fired on the British at Singapore or Hongkong that our Navy would answer by firing on them, this traffic continued.

Who were these Jap agents in America, and why were they not punished as war criminals? They were not Japs. They claim to be Americans. It is known who they are. Why public attention has not been directed to them we cannot understand. Why any attempt is made to shield people who did this when it was apparent that we were being led into war by the back door will some day be brought to light by the American people.

Let us beware that no injustices be committed that will reflect upon us in the future. When men's minds are inflamed by war, most any man will do what he is ordered to do, whether he believes in it or not. Most anybody will take the part of his country, whether it is right or wrong. Let us be careful that in the future, the nations of the world do not point their fingers at us as the barbarians of the twentieth century. If we Americans want to do what is right, we can hardly wink at the atrocities of the Russians and punish the Germans and Japs who did the same thing.

Every nation will at some time stand before the bar of eternal justice. Let us then not assume too much of the "holier than thou" attitude. It is still fresh in the annals of history that we exterminated the Indian race in North America. What insignificant numbers were left we put in reservations and concentration camps. We may be starting something that will come back to visit us in future centuries.

We did not punish and exterminate the Confederate leaders. How fortunate! Yet we remind our people that it might be well to read the recorded atrocities and cruelties of Andersonville and Richmond, and of the northern prison camps. Let us read the charges that both the North and the South made against each other. The tales of these prison camps would astonish the majority of people today. Barbarity is a part of war. Don't start wars and then yell about barbarity on either side.

The Galveston News recently took to task the New York newspapers for their attitude in being fearful of communism. We wish we could impress sufficiently on the Galveston News, the Atlanta Constitution, the Indianapolis Star, the Squeedunk News and other newspapers out in the sticks that they will have nothing to say when communism is ready for direct action.

All the communists have to do is control New York, Washington, and Chicago, and the rest of the country must quickly fall in line. With the capture of New York, they have tied up the outside world and the domestic financial and banking structure. Every bank of any size in the country is tied up with New York, and local bankers will follow the advice doled out to them from New York, even though the New York banker has a pistol at his head when he sends the telegram. In Washington they will have obliterated the former existing government and set themselves up in its place. All the functions of Government which stream out from there will be in their hands. With the capture of Chicago, they will have paralyzed the transportation system so that the opposition cannot get from one part of the country to another.

A handful of communists in Russia only had to capture St. Petersburg and Moscow. Dissatisfied elements sprang up everywhere else and caused trouble the same as they would in this country. A handful of revolutionists took over in Mexico by simply operating from Mexico City. The rest of the country had nothing to say. Neither the Spanish republicans nor the falangists had more than a small minority of the people organized. Mussolini took over Italy with a rabble army. Latin-American revolutionists turn over governments with a few hundred armed men.

oOo

It is these country newspapers that keep alive the worn-out tradition of the Republican and Democratic parties in this country. Yet, if some philanthropist would offer a prize to the country editor who could tell the difference between the two parties, he would start something interesting. They would have to go back 80 years and fight the Civil War over again, ending with the Bryan regime. There the two parties amalgamated their principles, and there has never been any difference between them since.

Someone should offer a big enough prize to attract a lot of publicity. Ridicule is the most powerful weapon in the world, and the two parties could be laughed out of existence. Shakespeare said, "No power on earth can stand up against ribald laughter."

It is time to issue another set of stamps for the over-run countries. The flag issues have advanced in price more than any commemorative issue in late years. Most anyone will gladly pay face for a cancelled flag stamp and the mint issues are bringing several times face already.

We should now issue stamps for Finland, Roumania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia, Hungary — all over-run by Russia. Let us issue one for Indo-China, over-run by the French. For Tripoli, Hongkong, and Malaya, over-run by the British, and for Indonesia, over-run by the Dutch. The Government would make a big profit on these stamps, and it would be appreciated by these countries who are longing for someone to restore their liberty.

Most people believe the Dutch had no more right to send an army into Indonesia to shoot down those people, enslave them, deprive them of their liberty, and rob them of their resources than the Germans had to invade and over-run Holland. Let us go to war against these aggressor nations! To war! To war! Bally it up boys! Oh, for a disease-brained leader to whip us into it!

oOo

Some want to know how I dope it that China will be fighting with Russia against the Western block in the next war.

Britain drove China right into Russia's arms by grabbing Hong Kong and Shanghai again. It only convinced the Chinese that we were fighting for ourselves and not for them. When we withdraw our army and stop the flow of money to Kia-Chek he will quickly fold up and run out. He has no following. The Chinese regard him simply as a tool of the Western powers.

The French, sending an army back into Indo-China to subdue their aspirations for liberty, did not do us any good either. It was terrible for Germany to invade France—after France had declared war on her—but it was all right for France to invade Syria and Indo-China.

Architectural League,

115 East 40th Street, New York, N. Y.

Start a unique collection of medallion pieces with this historic two Jima medal, executed in imperishable bronze, just issued by The Society of Medalists as its first medal for 1945.

The Society is a fine arts organization whose chief objective is to develop appreciation of American sculptors and their work in the medallion field. Its members receive two bronze medallions each year which have been designed and modeled by America's leading sculptors. Dues are $8 annually.

NOTE: The two Jima issue is limited. Prompt action is suggested if you desire to start your collection with this medallion.

Due to unprecedented demand, the Society, for the first time, offers this great two Jima medal for public sale. The price is $5 each—to members $4 each. Start your own collection now by joining for the current year. Send the two Jima medal to your friends for Christmas. Appropriate gift for returning service men or their families.

Write for illustrated literature and further information on membership.

Those Roosevelts Would Do Anything For Money (Our Heading)

"For some time there have been brief news items in the press regarding the final disposition of the stamp collection formed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Many sources believed to be reliable have definitely stated that all of these stamps would ultimately be sold at public auction in the same manner as is now being done with the estate of Col. Green.

"In view of the fact that the stamps which were collected and accumulated by the late President were in many cases donated by various governments, including our own, in the possible belief that they would never be offered at public sale, but would repose in a public institution, it is almost certain that the disposal of the stamps in this way will arouse considerable feeling in the countries whose stamps are included in such sale, as well as among the stamp collecting fraternity.

"The Suburban Stamp and Curio Club of Boston now brings the whole discussion out into the open by submitting the question to the National Federation of Stamp Clubs, and through them to the press of the country. They point out that "many of these stamps were presented, especially those from foreign governments, with the idea that in time they would become the property of the nation."

The club then goes on record as suggesting "that the gift stamps from foreign governments, together with special varieties, printings, or special condition stamps issued by, or presented by, the United States Bureau of Engraving and Printing, should repose in a museum, preferably at Hyde Park, N. Y., or at the Smithsonian at Washington, D. C."

"This matter will be submitted to the members of the National Federation of Stamp Clubs in their next bulletin, but in the meantime we would like to have the views of our readers in this connection so that the executors of the estate will at least know the feeling of collectors on this important issue. Under the surface there has been much feeling expressed on this subject, even going so far as to say it would be "a betrayal of trust" to sell these stamps. It is therefore only fair that those entrusted with disposition of these stamps have the definite reaction of the philatelic public to such an action."—H. L. LINDQUIST, Publisher Stamps Magazine.

OHIO WAR COVER

A very interesting cover, containing three cancellations—Rome, Ohio; Berlin, Ohio; and Tokio, Ohio, has been put out by Dr. M. Forwarter of Van Wert, Ohio.

Dr. Forwarter mentions that he has a Currier print entitled "Capture of Major Andre" and that one of the three captors was Van Wart after whom Van Wert, Ohio, was named.

We might also add the interesting point that the word "Ohio" is a much used word in the Japanese language. President Taft used it to tell about the occasion when as Governor of the Philippine Islands he visited Tokyo. He was surprised to hear the populace down the line of parade crying, "Ohio, Ohio." He afterwards learned that the word meant "welcome."

Tongs

While we have a short supply of stamp tongs and a shorter visible stock of many accessories, the real pinch is coming in hinges and album pages. It is wise, if your supply man has no spare pages, to prepare to use either stock cards in a file or a good stock book or to temporarily mount on loose light pages and file those.

It cannot last forever, but the thing is getting annoying to many, and some even give vent to caustic remarks. The last waste paper collection has been made, so they say, so why not ease recovery by use of some patience? Your supply man has to be patient, too.

Philippine Issue

No one has given a lucid explanation of the reason why the Philippine issue, over-printed "Victory," should be short on the Special Delivery and long on the dollar value, or is it? Maybe some dealers just did not buy tops, thinking the rank and file would not want to spend that much money. But the Special Delivery is a 13 cent face item, not $1 face.

We will find many more such, and those dealers who are short sighted will lose money, while the push to fill the tops will inevitably raise the counter price, and also it will make a lot of unhappy collectors.

Crosses

Our collector friends who have "religious" topicals have posed a query that will take some explanation, perhaps research. A letter reads: "I have a group of religious symbols in my topical group and among the crosses is the one impressed on Latvia under Russian occupation."

This seems to be the Lorraine cross, plus a slanting bar, half-way down the shaft, under the double (or upper) horizontal bars, (series dated 1919 N1 to 36, Scott page 466, 1945 edition.) I have asked many for the explanation of this—they merely answer "Russian Cross", which maybe is right, but it does not explain anything.

It is recalled that the librarian of the local university was brought up in St. Petersburg, and he stated that he could go but little further in explanation and said "The cross looks like all the crosses I saw, but why the slanting bar was added I never found out." "Why" being the thing needful to explain—and it is still a mystery.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

ONE REASON collecting has become so popular is that people have learned that a money-system is not a complexed problem. They have always confounded it with banking and high-financing, understood only by high-up bankers. Barter and Trade is the most simple thing in the world, and a money system is merely a systemized form of barter and trade. Banking did not give birth to money, money gave birth to banking. Money is too often looked upon as a highly complicated device of government coinage. The little boy's definition of money as being "something you can spend" still holds good as the most understandable. Besieged cities and military prison camps often have money systems of their own, and they prove entirely satisfactory. The prisoners at Stalag in this war used cigarettes as a medium of exchange and they proved as satisfactory as would have coins themselves; they were not inconvenienced greatly without actual coins. An exchange quotes a released prisoner of Stalag:—"A smoke was an important thing in Stalag, because cigarettes were currency to us. We saved them against the necessities of living. A man had to work out his design for living a week or two ahead before he put a match to a cigarette."

A convict money system is in vogue in the Missouri penitentiary. Quoting an Exchange:—"Coupons money is issued for purchase by the convicts inside the prison and charged against their accounts of real money held for them by penitentiary officials. The coupons, printed in various denominations, are sold in books similar to ice coupon books. The system has been in use about four years, replacing the old brass metal tokens formerly used."

One does not have to be a graduate in high-finance to appreciate his coins; all he needs to know is his barter-and-trade, and that he learned when a boy using marbles as the go-between, and that is, all money is a go-between swappers. Don't become discouraged by big high-finance parlance, just take the little boy's definition, "something you can spend," and you will find numismatics as understandable a science as botany, astronomy or geology.

A Welcome Debunkure

Notwithstanding the stigma of "root of evil" placed on money by biblicists, coin collectors still love their money, and consider their collection as a passport to Paradise. We have been taught from earliest childhood that moneyists have about as much chance of crashing the Pearly Gates as a camel has of passing through the eye of a needle. But even that hasn't weaned people from the quest of the evil-root. Debunkers of our favorite "facts" of history are usually frowned upon, but Max Nomad is one debunker that will get the glad hand from all money-minded persons. In the American Mercury he says that the original of the "camel and needle's eye" comparison used the word rope, not camel, and that the switch from rope to camel was made in the translation from the original Greek. In Greek, he says, rope is Kamilos and camel is Kamelos, and the Latin translator got his words crossed. This is good news to the coin collectors who feared that the "lovers of the evil root" might include them; it helps considerably, for there is a lot of difference between roping a needle and driving a camel through its eye.

1804 DOLLAR

R. Green, Chicago coin dealer, last month sold an 1804 dollar for a record price of $5,000.00.

ROB BEBEE

The Bebee Coin & Stamp Company of Chicago was robbed last month in the amount of about $2,000.00: All was covered by insurance. The robber apparently knew the stock and something about how to gain entrance.

ROSS' ANNUAL ODE

Merry Christmas, Pearl Ann Reeder, and a Happy New Year, too, I hope that dear old Santa will be mighty good to you; That he will fill your rayons with presents by the score, With an overflow enough to carpet the whole floor. For no one deserves it more than you, the steadfast Pearl, Who kept your poise midst stir and noise all through the war's mad whirl; Priorities and shortages meant not a thing to you, You simply overcame them all and waded right on through. You sat there in the editor's chair, efficiency sublime, And you saw that, no matter what, HOBBIES went out on time; And its high standard was maintained, it did not drop a bit, Because you with pencil blue was there to 'tend to it. With all the extra war time work piled up to beat the band, You never were too busy to lend me a helping hand; Your patience and forbearance, your ever optimistic stance, Kept me up and doing when things to me seemed all askance. For the many favors shown me I never can repay, So I'll just hold up the 'cheerful cup' and send this toast your way:—"Merry Christmas—Happy New Year, to you, my patient boss, Here's How—and God Bless you"—your coin-friend.

—FRANK C. ROSS

Recollections of An Old Collector

By THOMAS L. ELDER

Shekels and Cents

The acquirement recently of a very fine shekel of Simon Macabaeus B. C. 143, prince of the Jews for a moderate sum, with no price advance over ten years ago poses a comparison.

This shekel bears the cup or chalice, "Jerusalem the Holy," and on the other side the triple lily, or Aaron's rod budding and "Shekel Israel." It is a very well modeled coin for its age.

Why such a remarkable coin can be obtained for the same old price as before while the writer finds $130 asked today for an uncirculated 1856 cent, which sold five years ago for $25 is a puzzle. It is true that these fine old ancient coins, as well as those of Egypt, Greece and Rome have shown but small advances over former years, yet these coins have just as much art, archaeological and historic interest connected with them as ever. Take the Liberty head nickel one of which is reported to have sold for $3750 for one dated 1913.

That is rather puzzling when you consider the 1913 looks exactly like the 1912 one which can be obtained today for perhaps a dollar or even less. The 1856 eagle cent is a coin of no artistic merit and at least 10,000 got struck that year. The 1913 nickel is of course very rare, but of no special artistic merit.

American collectors reach high for special American issues including Kohler Bars of gold and others, while the handsome little denarii of Caracalla and Gordianus III, that mild and good young man of ancient Rome, remain for less than a dollar apiece. Caracalla built wonderful marble baths; he made history.

The cost of a coin in silver bearing the name of Julius Caesar, "the mightiest Roman of them all," costs about $3.50, only the price of a very good 1794 cent, while one with head on may be had for fifteen dollars, the price of a good 1793 cent. A beautiful gold coin of Alexander the Great, one of the greatest men who ever lived, is $35 to $50, while a nice gold coin of the great Napoleon I, costs about $15 or $16. A silver coin of Philip II, who had several wives and lived before 1594 costs a dollar for the small size, the price of a red uncirculated Indian head cent.

And here's another bargain, a silver coin of the Roman Philip the Arab, showing animals on the reverse, the beasts of the arena, and commemorating the 1000th anniversary of the founding of Rome. Such a coin costs not much more than a dollar.

My Christmas Greeting

To all you collectors of pennies and dimes, May your Christmas be "good" And the New Year be "fine." I hope you're successful in all you pursue. And find what you need—be it old, be it new. Some like them "fair" as long as they're dated. Others want them "fine" or "uncirculated." But be what they may, I know it's the truth. We all have a yen for the hard to get "proof." So success to you all, good friends of mine. In collecting your dollars, pennies and dimes.
—C. V. REEMSNYDER.

Indian Lore; Ancient and Otherwise

By WILSON STRALEY

SOME EARLY California Indian tribes used the nut-like seeds of the digger pine for food.

We are informed that credit for the invention of the chocolate bar must go to the pre-Columbian Indians of Guatemala who pressed the food into cakes in order to preserve it over a long period of time. However, it was civilized man who dressed the modern bars in the colorful wrappers encountered today.

O. W. Nixon in his book "Whitman's Ride Through Savage Lands," (Winona Pub. Co., 1905), discussing the results of missionary effort among the Indians tells this story: "As to the benefits from missionaries to the Indians themselves eternity alone will reveal how little or how much good was conferred. The Cayuse was a trading tribe of Indians, and were almost as unscrupulous in their dealings as Wall Street is today. Dr. Whitman had hard uphill work in changing their customs. Yet many of the Cayuse became Christians. Old Istikus was a prince among Christian man, savage as he was. For sixteen years after the death of his loved friends, (Dr. and Mrs. Whitman), he regularly went to the door of his wigwam, rang the old mission bell, and invited all to come in to prayers. General Joel Barlow, who was one of the commissioners after the treaty of peace in 1855, to settle the Indians upon their reservation says: 'I found forty-five Cayuse and one thousand Nez Perces who have kept up regular family worship, singing from the old hymn books, translated into their language by Mrs. Spaulding. Many of them showed surprising evidences of piety.'

Curari, the mysterious arrow poison used by the Indians of South America living east of the Andes, has the property of preventing the

ALLEN BROWN

510 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, 10, Illinois

was on the way up the river from St. Louis to Leavenworth, and I decided to take passage on it from Kansas City to St. Louis on its return trip; so in order to have a day in Kansas City, I joined a party of four others, who chartered a hack and drove to Kansas City on the Kansas side of the river. We left Leavenworth about noon. It turned the mud, only partly frozen, made the traveling very bad, so that our progress was slow. After dark came on we followed the wrong road, which led us into the thick woods near the Missouri River. Much time was lost in getting back to the road, so that we did not reach Wyandotte until about four o'clock in the morning. It grew colder during the night, and, as none of us was prepared for such severe weather, we frosted our toes. We were glad to get to the house of a Wyandotte Indian and warm ourselves in front of his hospitable log fire. I took breakfast with the Indian family, who, by the way, were quite civilized; their house was the only public place of entertainment in Wyandotte."

Wanted: Wooden Indian

Some rich man, whose name we have not been able to learn, searched Chicago recently for a wooden Indian. He was willing to pay any price, because he probably deducted the cost from his income tax inasmuch as he gave it to an educational institution.

We had one in Hobbies Museum, but of course, did not want to sell it. Boyer did not want to sell his. The cigar store man on North Clark Street who has one of the best in the country would not part with his. We referred the party to Dr. Pendergast in Terre Haute who has just about a monopoly on them, but the doctor could not be located. One was finally found in the antique shop of L. E. Dicke in Evanston.

The Indian was to be put on a platform and wheeled on to the football field during the game between Northwestern and Illinois as a trophy for the winner.

A press note states: "Arkansas is a word of Indian derivation: was once another name for the Quapaws, a tribe of the Siouan family of North American Indians."

DEADWOOD DICK, the prince of the Road; or, The Black Rider of the Black Hills. Beadle Half Dime Library No. 1, published in 1877. Deadwood Dick and Calamity Jane adventures in the first of the 1,167 "dime novels" published in this great Beadle Library from 1877 to 1904.

FRANK READE and his Steam Man of the plains; or, The Terror of the West by "Noname." The first of the famous Frank Reade invention stories, roaming the West and shooting Indians from wagon drawn by a steam Robot. Wide Awake Library No. 541, published 1883. From that year to 1905, boys were enthralled with stories of Frank Reade armored tanks — automobiles — submarines and all types of airships — all "come true" today!

FRANK JAMES ON THE TRAIL. One of the first of the "wild and wooly" bandit dime novels, published shortly after the killing of Jesse James — in the very rare Morrison Sensational Series No. 46, in 1882.

THE HAUNTED CHURCHYARD; or Old King Brady, the Detective, and the Mystery of the Iron Vault by a New York Detective Library No. 371, published 1890. One of the early and best of the 1,000 "Brady" Detective stories published by Tousey in this Library and the Secret Service Weekly where he adventured with Young King Brady and Alice Montgomery.

THE GOLD BULLET SPORT; or The Knights of the Overland by Hon. Wm. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill). Beadle Dime Library No. 83, published in 1878. One of the rarest of the many "Buffalo Bill" novels published in this Library from 1879 to 1899. Adventures with Dead Shot Dick of Denver — Calamity Kate — Buckskin Ben and others — in Wild West towns and on the Overland Trail.

MULDOON'S BOARDING HOUSE, by Tom Teaser. Snaps No. 39. Muldoon the Solid Man with his interesting family and boarders make this one of the funniest of all the "comic" dime novels which gave hilarious enjoyment to boys from 1879 to 1904.

GENTLEMAN JOE, The Gilt Edged Sport, by Jos. E. Badger, Jr., Log Cabin Library No. 159. The first of the many "Gentleman Joe" novels in this Library, very rare. Full of the old fire and gusto of the Wild West and its bold bad men!

THE JAMES BOYS IN NO MAN'S LAND; or The Bandit King's Last Ride, by D. W. Stevens. N. Y. Detective Library No. 438. One of the best and most thrilling of the many James Boys stories published in this Library, with many extra lurid illustrations.

HORATIO ALGER, Jr., Adrift in New York; or Dodger and Florence Braving the World. As published in a rare dime novel format (Brave and Bold No. 45). Boy hero and girl friend successfully brave the dangers of the wicked city, in spite of the machinations of the villain Curtis Waring. All in the best "Alger" style!

IT'S A GIFT!

of hitherto unknown regions, thus assisting the commercial navigators who followed.

How does one go about building up a collection of whaling or other books? — Advertise. For a number of years I have advertised in HOBBIES, and have picked up some of my most treasured possessions in this manner. Letters have been received from Maine to Florida and from Boston to San Francisco, to say nothing of those received from India, Australia, England, Scotland, Canada, and many other places.

Several of my best friends are those men who live among their wares, and in their shops I have made the acquaintance of many delightful personalities. Who would think of meeting Donald McMillan and Steffanson, the explorers, in an old second-hand book shops? I did! It is surprising how many nautical items can be purchased in stores far from the sea.

What makes books rare? In some cases I have found the answer but in others it is an unsolved mystery and at times utterly ridiculous. Auction sale prices are not always criterions of value. I have seen many a book sell at auction for five times what it could be purchased for from any one of ten dealers. Yet some very rare items have been picked up at these sales and one is always looking for a "sleeper." Edward Newton has stated that his very rare collection should be sold at auction so that any collector might have an opportunity to share in the purchase of one of his cherished books.

THE MORSE CONVERSION

By MAJOR B. R. LEWIS

IT HAS been thought that the muskets converted to breech-loaders by the Morse patent at the Government Armories were of caliber .58, using the rubber-base Morse cartridge of that caliber to be found in most cartridge collections.

A study of ordnance records indicates that something is wrong with this story. While I haven't all the answers, it appears that most of the muskets altered used a caliber .69 cartridge, perhaps one similar to that shown in the Morse patent drawings, which is not the rubber-base type.

According to records in the archives, dating from December 1858 to February 7, 1878, the following are the number of rifles made and their disposition.

In December, 1858, Springfield Armory received one sample musket converted by the Morse system. In 1868, this specimen was issued to the Armory Museum.

During the Fiscal Year, 1859, 1,000 Model 1822 muskets were drawn from store to be converted. Of these, 400 were turned back, 56 completed. On April 22, 1859, the Ordnance Office received two of the 56; one was sent to the Muzzy Rifle and Gun Manufacturing Company; and in February 1860, 53 were issued to Major Ramsey at the Washington Arsenal for trial. The remaining 544 were never completed as funds authorized for this project were exhausted.

In 1860, caliber .58 Morse ammunition was made for the Navy Department at Frankford Arsenal. Ordnance records do not indicate in what arms these were to be used. Did the Muzzy Rifle and Gun Company intend to make rifles for the Navy? These caliber .58 cartridges did not fit the Army muskets made up to that date, as they were caliber .69, rifled.

In September 1860, one rifle was altered to Morse breech-loader (caliber .58) and issued to Harpers Ferry Armory, as a sample. Machinery for manufacturing the Morse conversion was being set up there and was later captured by the Confederate troops before production began.

In 1860, three caliber .54 Harpers Ferry rifles were altered to Morse at Springfield, and four carbines were started but never completed. These seven all remained at the Armory and in 1877, were transferred to the Museum.

Thus, it appears that Morse cartridges were probably made at Frankford Arsenal in calibers .54, .58, and .69. The first two are of the conventional Morse type, but examination of the caliber .69 rifle indicates that this arm used something different. From the chamber dimensions, it seems that the cartridge must have a case about 1.5 inches in length and about .72 of an inch in diameter near the head. As part of the bolt face fills the rear portion of the chamber, this must be a rimless cartridge, in order to accommodate the extractor provided. It would be one of the first rimless type cases, if this is correct. Ignition is center fire. Is a cartridge answering this description known to HOBBIES readers, or does someone have an identified caliber .69 Morse cartridge?

A PARADE IN 1788

In Philadelphia, on July 4, 1788, a parade and celebration was held in honor of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. A great many of the contemporary trades, skills and professions were represented including that of the gunsmiths. The following is a description of the float representing the aforementioned skill: ("LXI.—Gunsmiths—A stage erected upon a four-wheel carriage, drawn by four horses, being in length fourteen feet, and in breadth eight feet, with a motto in large letters on each side, "Federal Armory," with a number of hands thereon at work, employed in different branches of the trade, conducted by two senior masters, viz: John Nicholson and Joseph Perkins, Abraham Morrow, bearing a standard at the head of the company, in rear of the carriage, the standard decorated with sundry devices, representing the arms belonging to the trade.")

P. 451, History of Philadelphia, 1600-1884, Thomas Schaff & Thomas Westcott; the L. H. Everts & Co., Philadelphia 1884, The Lippincott Press.

Daniel Boone's Gun

(Fanny Butcher in the "Chicago Tribune")

Hervey Allen and his matchless wife both seemed to me unchanged, either physically or from the great hearted, kindly pair that I had seen much of one summer 10 years ago. . . . They live on a country road well outside Miami—nearer Cocoonut Grove than anywhere else, probably—in a sort of openwork compound, their own house surrounded by guest cottages occupied by friends and relatives. . . . Over the entrance door is a long musket almost as tall as a man, like the one held by Salatheil Albine on the jacket of "The Forest and the Fort." . . . I discovered it was Daniel Boone's—not a replica, but Dan's own private firearm. . . . How? Well, by the always effective process of asking questions. . . . I also asked questions about the fireplace with a hearth almost waist high. . . . It is the kind they have in Bermuda. . . . Hervey Allen lived there part of the time he was writing "Anthony Adverse." . . . It heats the body, leaves the feet unburnt—perfect for cool nights in the tropics.

He is hard at work on the third volume of the saga, works regular hours every day, does none of the whoop-la things some Miamians do, intends to stay where he is, summer as well as winter.

. . . He has closed the fine old house he owns on the Maryland shore, like many other people whose country life is no more.

PIONEER RECORDING ARTISTS

for their, to me, immortal skits and duets. I base my choice of Billy Murray not so much because of his long and singular record as because of a peculiar freshness in his voice, which, combined with his wit and versatility, made everything that he did—dialect or straight—good. He really knew how to put over a song. Eddie Cantor has a touch of the same genius, without the voice and without the variety."

Bill said he voted for Henry Burr for No. 2 spot, "on the record, though I'm not over-fond of ballads." He tied Collins and Harlan for third place; gave Len Spencer fourth, and wound up after listing Stanley, Porter and Dudley, fifth, sixth and seventh.

John L. Norton, Sr., the "Wizard of Woodymay," of Boston, admitted that he cast his vote largely on the basis of preferences acquired when he listened, as a small boy, to wax cylinder records in the '90's. For this reason, the names of some of his choices will be unfamiliar to many present-day collectors. This is especially true of his fourth place entry, J. Aldrich Libbey, who famous for singing "After the Ball" in vaudeville 50 years ago, and A. D. Madeira, in seventh place, who made no records after the very early 1900's.

"There is nothing," Mr. Norton said, "for me to add to your 15 popular artists. As far as John Q. Public was concerned, you are 100 per cent correct, but that ain't the way I heard them. Remember that I heard them in the 'early earlies.' Billy Murray wasn't on any soft wax records, but most of my favorites were."

This is Mr. Norton's list: 1—Collins; 2—Will F. Denny and Ed. Favor; 3—Dan Quinn; 4—Libbey; 5—Murray; 6—Madeira; 7—Joe Natus; 8—Stanley; 9—Golden; 10—Dudley; 11—Hooley; 12—Helen Trix; 13—Roberts; 14—Manuel Romain.

Buttonaire

New York—Collectors would certainly be lost without your magazine, and I do wish to compliment you on your Button Department. The articles are splendid, and the advertisements of great help in making contacts.—Mrs. LeRoy Parker.

No Words Adequate

Texas—Our ad has brought splendid results and we cannot praise HOBBIES Magazine by mere words.—Simon's.

The Customer's "E"

Ohio—I have received excellent response from ads.—Susan MacDonald.

Makes Friends

Nebraska—I think the subscribers to HOBBIES must be extra special people. From the ad I placed in a current issue, I found a number of pieces of the Haviland china I was wanting, and finally today, the copy of "The Practical Book of Chinaware" by Eberlein and Ramsdell. All the contacts from the ad have been so very pleasant, just like dealing with friends.—Mrs. Ned Preston.

Tops

Kentucky—I am so glad I was able to get it, as I enjoy and think it the most interesting magazine you can have in your home.—Mrs. J. Adlio Nelson.

Cheap Paper Not for Cuts

Massachusetts—Now here's someone who likes the cheaper paper you apologize for in the August issue! It is easier on the eyes (no shine) and much easier to mark on. I go thru everything in HOBBIES with a fine tooth comb, you might say, and make marginal notes that are of inestimable value to me, both as an advertiser myself and as a reader. Mrs. J. Herbert Landick.

Wanted His Hobbies

Ohio—When I first got back from overseas, at least five different newstands told me you had quit publishing six months ago, and I was very disappointed, but today I found HOBBIES in the Public Library and am happy again. Enclosed please find subscription. My main collection is unusual—razor blades in wrappers (now have about 1200 U. S. and 600 foreign), but also collect stamps, coins and swap other items.—E. Gerald Hanes.

Thanks

Washington, D. C.—I am highly delighted with your magazine and recommend it to many of my friends.—Karl Stecher.

But it was Tough

Massachusetts—I feel that dealers everywhere, should be very grateful to the entire HOBBIES organization for the splendid way in which it carried on during the days of varied shortages.—Virginia A. Kearney.

The Pack-Rat

Ohio—My husband gave me HOBBIES magazine last year for Christmas and I now wonder how I got along without it all of this time—I hope my subscription will never lapse as I eagerly read the magazine from cover to cover. I seem to possess certain pack-rat proclivities so I am not only interested in dolls but various other things, however, I am just selfish enough to wish that sometime more space could be devoted to Dollology in your magazine, but it is perfect just as it is.—Mrs. Lee Gardner

You May

Maryland—May I take this opportunity of telling you how thoroughly I enjoy HOBBIES, and how anxiously I look forward to it each month.—Claire Pinerman.

You're Right

Indiana—HOBBIES is such an essential part of our shop and household that we do not wish to miss a single copy. I know of no better panacea for worries than a hobby or HOBBIES.—Mrs. F. W. Kraft.

Business Need

Colorado—Since I am again entering the antique business I cannot be without your magazine.—Mrs. R. R. Larkey...

Libraries Must Order Direct

New Hampshire—Your magazine has been one of our most popular ones. We assure you that we shall miss it very much if it cannot be ordered.—Anne E. Leach, Librarian.

We'll Raise the Price on Ye

Ohio—HOBBIES is the greatest magazine value today, barring none.—Henry L. Seibert.

Up Hill Creek

Montana—The water would run up hill here in Clark's Fork river, if I didn't get the wonderful magazine HOBBIES.—Aaron Thompson.

A Lift

Ohio—I would find it impossible to keep my shop open without the help of this magazine. As for your editorials, keep them up, please. I turn to them first and it gives me a lift for days.—H. Louise Eberle.

A Family Affair

Illinois—My daughter and I are sending you our check today for another year of HOBBIES—to us, the "tops" of all our magazines. We both want to tell you how perfectly delighted we are when our HOBBIES arrives. Thank you for another wonderful year.—Mrs. Lawson Fore.

Takes Place of Travel

Illinois—I watch for the mail man and give myself a vacation until I practically finish reading the magazine from cover to cover. I cannot travel far physically because of occupation, but I can cover much territory and many interests through HOBBIES. An enthusiastic subscriber.—Mrs. Elmer Cariberg.

Sells 'Em Far and Wide

Connecticut—During the past year I have sold to HOBBIES advertisers in the South, the far West, middle West and nearby eastern states, all have been very reliable, satisfactory buyers. Thanks to the help of your HOBBIES.—M. M. Good-enough.

Thanks Yuh

California—I want to renew my HOBBIES and I want to thank you for the splendid work you're doing.—Mrs. Mac Riedel.

Back Home

Illinois—Please find attached my check to cover one year's subscription. I have just been discharged from the Army and am anxious to renew my contract with the magazines I used to enjoy so much.—George Moody.

Sales and Education

Ohio—Our previous ads are still getting results and business here at the shop is good. Your magazine is not only a must for making sales, but also one for its educational value to buyer and dealer alike.—Elizabeth Moore.

We Just Shuffle Along

Tennessee—Mr. Lightner's articles lead me to believe there are still a few well balanced men in our country. Wish we had a dozen like him in Washington, who could think and see as clearly as he does. I do appreciate HOBBIES each month, doubly knowing the difficulties you are having with help and paper shortages.—Mrs. B. A. Lawrence.

We Need Help and Paper

Illinois—They do not have copies for sale at our newstand, and have calls all the time. How I wish could get copies for my customers as I know how much it means to me, a button collector. I read every section, and would be lost without HOBBIES.—Nellie McMullan.

Quits Eating for Hobbies

New York—Please do not let me miss a copy. If it ever had to come to a crisis as to HOBBIES, or skipping a few meals, I would skip the meals. In fact the day it comes, I get too thrilled to care if I eat or not. Buttons are my hobby, and I don't know how I ever would have learned what I have, if not for HOBBIES. A hobby surely keeps a person from brooding, or getting self-centered. And hobby minded people seem so very human. I mean the real ones, not the ones who are interested only in the value angle.—Mrs. F. R. Shortt.

Favorite of All

Indiana—I am just lost without HOBBIES. Hope I'm in time for next issue. I enjoy this magazine more than any other I take.—Mrs. Verne E. E. Geiger.

BELLS

BELLS, BEES AND BIRDS

By ALLIS M. HUTCHINGS

TO THE BELL collector the subject of bells has an ever widening horizon. The possibilities of interest are more than at first appreciated. Even in small collections the differences in design, use, material, or historical significance give character to the individual bell.

The collection at Mission Inn, at Riverside, California, has bells of many sizes, from a tiny solid gold bell of the ancient civilization of over one thousand years ago of the Cioroteca Indians of Central America, to a Temple gong over six feet high from Nanking, China. As in stamp collection, bells can be classed in various groups, on account of their use, decoration or age.

The bell with the bee background is of copper and is hand-wrought, dating from 1750, and is from Queretaro, Mexico. Its tone is one of sweetness, but has a penetrating and far reaching quality. It hung in an outer patio of an ancient monastery on the outskirts of the city. That it is old is evidenced by the worn groove on the inside of the bell where the tongue has struck the metal for nearly two hundred years. The bell was always rung at sunset and at its summons the brothers working in the fields knew their labors, at least outside the monastery, were over for the day. In the nearby orchards of this institution bees were kept. They also seemed to recognize the curfew, as at the sound of the bell they would regularly return to their hives near the monastery portal. This became such a well known occurrence that the bell was always known as the "bee calling bell."

Falconry, that ancient sport of kings, is still indulged in among the potentates of India. The falcon bell of the Inn collection is very light weight, with closed mouth, and about the size of a thumbnail, and has a silvery finish. It is fastened to the foot of the bird, and its tinkle is helpful in locating the bird on its flight for his prey. This particular bell was used with a Goshawk in this medieval style of hunting in India.

In California it often happens that flocks of turkeys raised in outlying districts are harassed by coyotes and other wild animals, as well as hawks. The turkey bell, like the small brass one with two clappers, is strapped on the leg on the turkey and puts "scare" into a possible molester of its well being. These bells are also helpful in locating the hens when they are nesting in the fields and cannot be easily seen.

A silver bell linking ancient times with modern is from Italy. Its handle is in the design of the Roman Imperial Eagle, holding in his talons a bundle of fasces or rods with the head of an ax. This was the special symbol of the Caesars of Rome, whose legions conquered so much of Europe at the beginning of the Christian era. The name Fascism is derived from Fasces. This symbol was revived by Mussolini, undoubtedly with a fond hope that he would soon be the all powerful ruler of modern Italy. SPQR on a tablet at the base of the design are Latin initials signifying the ancient Roman Empire.

Altar chimes used in Roman Catholic churches often have three or more bells of different tones, which when rung give forth a very melodious sound. An interesting altar chimes, a replica of one from a French cathedral, has four bells, each of different tone. The four are joined by a bronze rustic frame work with a twig-like hoop handle. At the top of each bell, perched on a twig, is a small bird, which seems to give the bell tones of bird-like quality.

A green bronze bell with crown top is a small likeness of the largest of San Juan Capistrano Mission in California. The inscription, translated, reads "Praised be Jesus and Saint Vincent for Brother Vicenti Fuster and Brother Juan Santiago 1796." Capistrano Mission, founded in 1776, had as its most prominent priests these two men, who each served it almost continuously for twenty years. This shell was the only one in the Mission to honor local priests by name. The Swallows, which form the handle of the bell, are a reminder of "Las Golendrin," who make their homes under the eaves of the Capistrano Mission church. For many years on March 19th, the flocks of swallows arrive at the Mission to stay until October 23rd, the feast day of St. John of Capistran. An Indian legend relates that when the swallows leave they fly straight to Jerusalem for the winter; each carrying a twig to light on in the ocean when they tire!

Bell collecting is never a prosaic pastime. The collector with imagination (which each of us has), can spend many happy moments conjuring the yesteryears of the bells of his hobby.

TRAVEL SEARCH FOR BELLS

By A. C. Meyer

$2.50 postpaid.

In the last 10 years, semi-retired, Mr. Meyer and his wife, also a bell enthusiast, indulged their hobby of bell collecting, which has taken them to many parts of the world. In every city and virtually every crossroads, they added interesting specimens to their collection. Now "grounded" because of the war, Mr. Meyer has summarized it all in a down-to-earth story.

SHELLING ON CHRISTMAS ISLAND

By EDNA M. NORTHPROP

IN THE aftermath of war, United States soldiers in some far reaches of the South Pacific still find "shelling" one activity that occupies much of their leisure time. However, it is good to say that this type of shelling, fortunately, does not require the use of cannon or powder, and is quite an acceptable pastime for the personnel.

To participate in this fascinating diversification, the soldier dons heavy shoes and gloves to protect hands and feet from the sharp coral and stinging spines of sea urchins. He searches diligently through the coral, reaching into crevices which harbor the living shells. These shells are carried back to the beach and buried in the sand, where, in a short time, the soldier digs them up to find them clean and shining, as if an expert had polished them. Ants, maggots, and other insects do the polishing work, burrowing through the sand to reach the living parts of the shells, which they devour, leaving only the hard shell counterparts. This is the usual treatment given to the small greenish-ivory shells, baby cowries, and also the larger dark colored ones, popularly called tiger shells.

After the soldier has accumulated a sufficient quantity, he sometimes tries his hand at making them into necklaces, belts and other articles. This writer was the recipient of a comical turtle made of a dark shell for the body, with small ivory colored ones for legs and head.

Although, as mentioned above, shelling, as described here, does not involve the use of gunpowder or gun, it still has its elements of danger, for much of the underwater area, along the beaches where these shells are to be found, is spotted with deep holes capable of swallowing a person unawares, who may be swept away with the undertow. Reports tell of one instance, at least, when this occurred. Planes were sent out and an intensive search conducted, but all was to no avail.

Many soldiers, displaying a businesslike attitude, do not overlook the commercial aspects of shelling. These enterprising individuals, when transferred, furloughed or otherwise removed from one base to another, carry their stock of shells and drum up a brisk trade. It is reported that prices in Hawaii for these novelties range from seven cents apiece for the little ivory shells to ten or eleven cents for the larger 'Tiger' shells. Other shells which excite the soldier-hunter's curiosity, and thereby forms an object of his search, are the "angel wings," cone shells, sea urchins, and "cat's eyes." The form of the latter shell found on Christmas Island, from which the information for this article was received, are of no particular value, lacking the fine color of those found on the beaches at Tarawa and other South Pacific islands.

BUTTERFLIES

Gems and Minerals

THE QUEEN OF JEWELS

By FRANK FARRINGTON

NEVER HAS there been a time when the diamond was not the very queen of gem stones; in present day jewelry; in antique, medieval or ancient jewelry. It has always been a leading factor in gem commerce, in gift buying, in precious stone investment, in personal adornment, in the crowning of kings and potentates, in the operations of smugglers and second-story men.

With diamond prices sky-high and diamond cutters about as plentiful as sugar coupons, this bit of nature's by-products in the making of pure carbon still leads all the rest in interest and demand.

Even children have worn diamonds, as witness the smallest diamond ring known to history, the one Cardinal Wolsey put on the finger of the tiny two-years-old Princess Mary Tudor, daughter of Henry VIII, when she was betrothed to the baby Dauphin of France, one of the youngest betrothals in civilized history as well as the smallest diamond ring. One wonders whether any recollection of that event endured when she became "Bloody Mary."

Queen Elizabeth had a diamond ring which comprised two diamonds so held together as to be separable. She sent one of these to Mary Queen of Scots, as a sign of enduring friendship and later repudiated the pledge and had Mary's head cut off!

It is related that Sir Walter Raleigh, when enamored of Queen Elizabeth, wrote on a window pane with the diamond of his ring, "Fain would I rise but that I fear to fall." His faith in the Virgin Queen evidently was not equal to his infatuation and she used her own ring to write below his inscription, when she found it, "If thy heart fail thee, do not rise at all." And that was that, with the diamond as predecessor of the fountain pen.

The accounts of the Diamond Necklace entanglement of the court of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette have been many and varied. Doubt has been cast upon the authenticity of the story, but it is too well substantiated to permit of questioning.

It was an incident involving one of the most wonderful pieces of diamond jewelry known to royal history. A necklace which was composed of five hundred wonderful diamonds, chosen with all the care a royal jeweler would give to making an adornment to be presented by Louis XV to his favorite, Madame DuBarry. But this Louis died before the necklace was finished, and with the famous, or infamous, DuBarry banished from court, it was, in due time, the basis of an intrigue that involved Marie Antoinette, the queen of Louis XVI.

This is the story reduced to a short short.

The Countess de Lamotte, one time a barefooted child gaining a livelihood by stealing potatoes from the fields or by minding cows for a few centimes, had some, perhaps very little of the blood of the House of Valois in her veins and after the Marquise de Boulaingvilliers had picked her out of the streets and educated her, she married a worthless gendarme, Nicolas de Lamotte and called herself "Comtesse de Lamotte-Valois." Now she began to climb the court ladder.

Her husband's pay was too little for her ambitions and she began to plunder the vain and foolish. Ripe for her scheming was Cardinal de Rohan who had a secret affection for the Queen, Marie Antoinette who, in her turn, had an inflexible dislike for his Eminence.

Comtesse de Lamotte, having become a member of the Queen's household, evolved various schemes by which she helped her worthless husband. They relieved the Cardinal of one sum after another by pretending to him that the Queen was secretly enamored of him and willing, when and if it could be arranged, to accept his attentions.

The culmination of the scheming came following a night when the pair of plotters were able to bring together for a moment's tryst in the Versailles park the love-sick Cardinal and a little blond prostitute, got up to look like the Queen. He kissed ecstatically the hem of her garment when she murmured to him, as per the Lamotte instructions, "You may hope that the past will be forgotten." De Rohan took this, as he was intended to, to mean that the real Marie Antoinette would overlook the crudities of his previous attempts to arouse her interest—which in truth, she had not even noticed.

Now that the Cardinal was really hooked and ready to follow the lead of the unscrupulous de Lamottes, the diamond necklace was brought into the picture. This necklace, worth some $3,500,000, was about to bankrupt the court jewelers, Boehmer &

Bassenge, who had put all their capital into that one investment, and it could be had at a bargain price.

The jewelers, thinking the Comtesse on intimate terms with the Queen, besought her aid in selling her the necklace. Upon seeing the marvelous piece, the heart of this unworthy descendant of the Valois almost ceased beating. Here was opportunity and she readily promised the jewelers that she would do something. Why not, she thought, try to persuade the love-lorn Cardinal to buy the necklace secretly and secretly give it to Marie Antoinette who, they had already induced him to believe, had developed a clandestine admiration for him?

The de Lamotte activity was increased and the suggestion was broached to him that the Queen was crazy to own the necklace but was so deeply in debt that she could not buy it. Why should not he, the great Cardinal de Rohan, put the finishing touch upon his romance by financing the purchase of the necklace, and so become the first minister of the realm and the favorite of the Queen?

The Comtesse reported to the Cardinal that the Queen was anxious to get the necklace without the King's knowledge and, so said they, would allow de Rohan to underwrite the transaction. The Cardinal, throbbing with excitement over the Queen's apparent complacency, agreed to the deal and himself wrote the contract between queen and jewelers, which the de Lamottes took away and brought back with what they said was the signature of Marie Antoinette.

The Cardinal advanced the money to the jewelers, a matter of 1600 thousand livres. He was secured, if he wanted other security than what he regarded as the Queen's acknowledgment of acceptance of his attentions, by what he regarded as her written promise to pay. The necklace was delivered to him and he thought himself canny when he insisted upon seeing that it was turned over to a person properly accredited as a representative of the Queen. He placed it in the hands of the de Lamottes and they located him behind a glass door whence he was to watch the transfer of the necklace. As he watched, a quietly dressed man, with an atmosphere of importance entered, saying "De par la Reine," (in the Queen's name) repeating it as he crossed the room. This man was one Retaux de Villette, presumed to be a secretary of the "Countess," but in reality something more than that, as well as being a collaborator in her crimes. But his official appearance and his "In the name of the Queen" convinced the Cardinal, too anxious to be convinced. And so the transaction was closed.

Recognition of the Cardinal, however, as he expected it from the Queen, did not come. She still ignored him. The de Lamottes stood him off with excuses. They had the necklace. The jewelers had the Cardinal's promise to pay. The Queen had nothing—expected nothing.

The conspirators broke up the necklace and took the diamonds to London and sold them separately and took to an extravagant life. In due time, the jewelers, not receiving the first payment when due, logically applied to the Queen whose promise to pay, they thought, they held, endorsed by his Eminence, the Cardinal. The Queen, after neglecting to read their appeal, with typical carelessness, told them truthfully, she knew nothing of the necklace deal.

They demanded payment from the Cardinal. They received only expostulations and objections as he turned back upon the de Lamottes. The plan of the conspirators began to break up. The jewelers appealed to the courts and the whole mess was dished up to the public through a trial at which the Queen was acquitted of any part in the conspiracy, though some of the mud long clung to her reputation. The Cardinal was discharged as was M. de Lamotte, but the self styled "Countess" was convicted, branded on each shoulder with a "V" (for Voluse, thief) and sent to prison for life. So ended the greatest of history's diamond conspiracies.

FRANK KOLBE
Doylestown, Pennsylvania

The bottom shelves are eleven inches from the floor, and it is on the bottom shelf of our first cabinet that we built this yard.

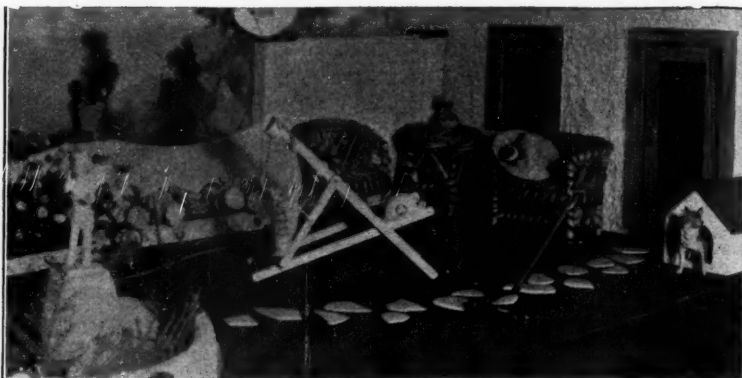

Eight inches on the right side of the shelf were used for the garage, leaving a space approximately 38x15" in which to plan our garden. Although everything is on the scale of an inch to a foot, this is not much space for a garden but we were determined to have one nevertheless.

The first step was to plan what to put in this space and how to arrange it to appear as realistic as possible. We decided to have the "house" at the left, so for the end wall my husband cut a piece of three-ply which exactly fits that space and can be slipped into place or withdrawn for repairs as needed.

After he had cut out the place for the window, I covered the entire board with art clay which was stippled while damp. When dry it was lightly rubbed with a piece of fine sandpaper and there was our "stucco" finish! The clay dried to a light cream color so no painting of it was necessary. That was our procedure for all the outside "stucco" walls.

On the section containing the door, a step of two layers of three-ply was nailed, then covered with clay, the top of which was smoothed and marked into squares. When dry they were painted a soft Venetian red to look like tiles. The wall at the right side of the garden which separates it from the garage, has a glass window and a door opening into the garage.

The garden wall along the back was also cut out of three-ply, with an extra strip nailed at intervals on the front and back for posts. After covering the entire length with clay for the usual stucco effect, I smoothed the clay on top of each post, marked it off like bricks, and when dry

"At the Sign of the Crest"

Wiswald-Wiswall Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

WISWALD

WHAT more beautiful and fitting Armorial Bearing could be found for a Christmas thought than the one you see today??? The stately Christmas trees—the deer that so often appears on Christmas cards because it is seen at best among snow-covered trees—the helmet and mantling for defense and protection—and—above all—a lone star, shining forth in its glory, the harbinger of "peace and good will among men."

And what could be more appropriate than the finding of this Coat-of-Arms among the records of beautiful, little, grand, peaceful, Switzerland??? In Rietstap's "Armorial General," a set of books written in French but containing records of Coats-of-Arms from all countries on the continent, and some from Great Britain, we find the following description: WISWALD—Soleure. D'or a un cerf clance au naturel, devant trois sapins de sinople, le tout soutenu d'une terrasse du meme. Crest—une étoile d'or. Lambrequin—d'or et de sinople.

Translated into English Heraldic terms: Or a stag courant proper in front of three fir trees vert, all on a mount of the last. Crest—a mullet or. Mantling—or and vert.

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A gold (or) shield on which is a stag of natural color, running. He is in front of three green (vert) fir trees, all on a green (of the same or last color named) mound. The crest is a gold star. The mantling over the helmet and around the shield is green (vert) lined gold (or). Rietstap always gives the colors of the mantling, as sometimes the grants on the continent are for one combination of colors on one side of the shield, and another on the other side, depending on the colors in the shield.

The stag is emblematical of administrative ability. Also he is one who loves, and is skilful in music, therefore symbolizing peace, policy, and harmony.

Trees all represent a life of great strength of character. A fir tree is symbolical of one whose influence reaches out in every direction, as the fragrance of the fir.

The star denotes Crusader ancestry, and while not always granted for service near Bethlehem, the emblem reminds us of that section of the Holy Land. The man bearing the star was one above the ruder sort of men, his character shining out beyond that of others, as the rays of the star.

Colors represent the personal characteristics of the original bearer, and are granted only if he be worthy. Gold signifies generosity and elevation of mind; green strength and sturdiness.

The one who "was worthy" of this grant had the family name of Wiswald. Family records show, and some have been printed, that a descendant of this family went to England, where the name was spelled Wiswall. His family and descendants resided in Dorsetshire and Somersetshire. In 1635 John and Thomas, brothers, came to New England. John, who settled in Boston seems to have few, if any, descendants of the Wiswall name.

Thomas married Elizabeth....., and late in life, Isabelle, widow of John Farmer. Thomas Wiswall "was an elder of the church, and was a useful man in every department of church, official, and social life." The New England Historical and Genealogical Register for January 1886, has an article naming four generations of his family.

Popular first names were Enoch, Ichabod, Noah, Ebenezer, Esther, Susanna, Caleb, Mercy, Hannah, Elijah, etc. Then there was Priscilla, who was named for her grandmother, Priscilla (Mullins) Alden, as her mother was Elizabeth Alden, wife of William Peabody. So—if anyone is in this line, he is eligible to join the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Then there was Oliver Wiswall—doesn't that name sound familiar? The first one was the first son of the first Enoch, given his mother's surname, for she was Elizabeth, daughter of the great scholar of Boston, John Oliver. Oliver and his brother Ebenezer both named sons Oliver, and it has been a favorite in all generations since that time.

Many Wiswalls were in the Revolutionary War, and through the generations the name may be found on the rolls of those serving their country in educational and civil affairs.

In the Encyclopedia of American Biography, Vol. 22, page 231, tribute is paid to Etna Joseph Wiswall of DeKalb, Ill., 1855-1924, educator, merchant and philanthropist, and in this article the mention is made of this Coat-of-Arms being granted to the family seated at Soleure, Solothurn, a canton and town in northwestern Switzerland.

Another family who has the same data about the origin of the name and Coat-of-Arms is that of Mrs. Frederick Minkler, of Evanston, Illinois, known by many D. A. R. members for her interest in patriotic projects. Somewhere along the line, in Connecticut or New York, the spelling was changed to Wisewell. She knows that her great-grandfather carried the name Wisewell, and he married Alice Whitman, sister of Marcus Whitman.

Various spellings of the name are Wiswald (Swiss), Wiswall, Wisewall, Wiswal, Wiswell, and Wisewell. Christmas Greetings to all who bear the name or belong to the line which has such a charming Coat-of-Arms!!

oOo

NOTE

May we call your attention to a grave error—from the heraldic standpoint—in the September issue of this column. (Whose it was—the printer's or mine is beside the point—I do not even know.) A "period" was omitted, and changed the entire meaning of the paragraph. I am going to bring this out forcibly, first because I find the same error in genealogies where proof is read by the author, and there is no reasonable excuse for the error; second, because persons who are not too familiar with heraldic language would not be able to detect the error, nor decipher the meaning.

Are you getting curious? Then, pick up Sept. "Hobbies," turn to page 124, and read the first lines of the 2nd column beginning with "Crest." "On a chapeau gules turned up ermine an escallop sable between two wings or Motto-Memoria pii aeterna," etc. This would read "—between two wings or. Motto-Memoria," etc. "OR" is the heraldic word for "GOLD," and the sentence stops there. The color-name is always after the object, or its other description. It is here "between two wings or." In another crest it might be "between two wings of an eagle erect or"; if not an eagle, perhaps "between two ostrich plumes or." When you get accustomed to stopping there, it does not seem awkward to you; and you never think of it as being our everyday preposition "or." The way it was in the article, one might think it meant "between two wings or a motto"—and that doesn't make sense. The escallop shell is between two gold wings.

Well, perhaps this error has served a good purpose, to call to our attention a common mistake which can be very confusing unless understood. So—please pardon both the mistake and this allusion to it! And notice that the MacFarland crest description ends with "or," also—a gold crown.

ISSUES THAT WILL

MAKE HISTORY

HOBBIES Staff is keeping abreast of the times. Herbert Garling, who makes up these pages each month, brought up some editions of the announcement of the Japanese surrender, and said "Better put these in the Museum; they will be historical before very long." Wilson Stanley, Kansas City, Mo., who contributes to HOBBIES almost every month, and who works on a Kansas City publication, sent special copies gotten out by his organization showing pictures of the Victory celebration, and news of the Japanese capitulation.

Truly, these items will be historical in a few years. Perhaps, these V-E, and V-J Day issues will be the last of their kind, if peace can be made perpetual.

Letters of the Famous

PARIS, Dec. 24, 1782.

DEAR SIR,—Will you be so good as to send me a copy of the Pensees sur la Revolution &c extracted from the Memorial of G. Pownal—if it is not to be had in any of the Bookseller's shops at the Hague, our friend Mr. Luzac will let you know where to find one, a gentleman here is very desirous of one, and I have promised him one if I can get it. Send it by the Post if you don't soon find a private Hand. Have you any News of my Son? We cannot say whether we are to have Peace or not. I wish the definitive Treaty were signed or the Negotiations broken off, that I may return to you. My Respects to your Family & to all our good Friends.

Yours affectionately

J. ADAMS.

oOo

SIR,—Inclosed I send you a Resolve of the Genl Court, directing an Inventory to be taken of all the Public Stores & Buildings left at Penobscot after the departure of the British troops. I am to request that you will appoint a suitable officer under your command with such aid as you shall judge necessary to proceed to Penobscot & give him Instructions in every respect strictly to carry into effect the views of the General Court manifested in the inclosed Resolve; after this business is effected you will please to transmit to me the Results of your doings. . . .

I am, with Respect, Sir

Your most obed. servt

JOHN HANCOCK.

Sherwood Anderson Letter

My recent comment on Sherwood Anderson's letters brought an unexpected response from an editor who had Anderson's promise to review a book. When performance did not follow the promise the editor prodded the author [prodding is something every editor has to learn] and eventually Anderson replied: "I hardly know how to answer your letter. When I make such promises my intentions are good enough. I get sidetracked because I become absorbed in some story. Writing articles isn't much in my line. I always intend to do what you ask and then it doesn't pan out. What am I to say?" It should be added that Sherwood Anderson's dilemma was by no means unique. Nearly every one makes promises and then finds the inexorable deadline coming on like Black Friday. The files of editors and publishers bulge with the good intentions of authors, some of whom have had their palms crossed with silver. Harry Hansen in the Chicago Tribune.

OUR MINIATURE GARDEN

painted it the same red color as the steps. The dividing lines between the "bricks" were painted white to resemble mortar. By the way, all of these walls are removable.

For the scene at the back I could not find a suitable picture long enough to cover the space, so I bought two large landscapes, and joined them by tearing around the tree at the right and filling in with my oil paints so that they blend into one continuous scene. And what a job that was!

We should have cut a piece of three-ply to fit that back space, upon which I would have painted or pasted a scene, then slipped it into place. But no! We always do things the hard way, and I proceeded to paste these pictures to the back of the cabinet itself.

The flood light above the high wall at the back is a small electric bulb thrust through a reflector cut and shaped from a tin can. It is enameled white on the inside and dark green on the outside. There is another light over the door, and all the wiring is done on the back of the cabinet.

The "grass" is part of a green rug, (it was a perfectly hideous rug but just right for a lawn), and the stepping stones are clay pressed flat and cut into different shapes and sizes while damp. The flower beds are small flat boxes filled with clay into which the stems of the flowers were pushed while it was still soft. When the clay dried it was painted brown to look like dirt. The outside of each box was covered with clay with small colored stones pressed into it.

All the flowers and ferns were purchased at the ten cent store except the tall ones in the center box at the back. There are real, everlasting star flowers from Brazil. The three pots of cactus on the wall posts are also ten cent store products, and a large spool, covered with clay and stones, was used for the base of the tree at the left.

The window sills and frames are cardboard painted with brown water color, and the Venetian blind, back of the glass in the large window at the left, is made of narrow strips of white cardboard overlapping each other. A fine strip of muslin was used for the pull strip on each side.

The door and door frame are also cardboard, and the crinkly sides of Bobbie pins were used for the grille in the door. The door bell at the left is the guard from a tiny screw hook, filled with clay and the tip touched with black enamel to make the push button. The number 1941 on the door is the year the yard was completed.

The door handle had us stumped for some time. We tried one thing after another, but none of them seemed to be just right, then Eureka! I took a pencil clip, bent the top back on itself, bronzed, it glued it to the door, and there was the handle!

The mail box flap at the right of the door is a piece of tin, bronzed, and the word "Mail" printed on it. The door mat with the letter "M" in the center is my first attempt at making hooked rugs.

The sun ball came from the ten cent store and the bird bath is a miniature wash stand which was bronzed. The birds and butterfly perched so jauntily on the edge are buttons stuck on with clay.

The garden hose consists of two catheters, spliced, and the nozzle (which can be seen just in front of the sun ball at the left), is the end of a shoe lace. A wire pin used for sales cards has been stuck in the lawn and is supporting the nozzle in a very realistic manner.

The fish pond holds the little white statue of Cupid which my mother gave me for a valentine when I was eleven years old. For this pond, my husband cut a small piece of three-ply around which I built a wall of clay, imbedding in it several agates which we found at Newport, Oregon, many years ago. A round mirror was placed on the bottom of the pond to cover the wood and a number of tiny gold fish were cut from orange paper and scattered on the mirror. Several flat pieces of fine fern were also placed on the mirror and all this was covered with a piece of clear cellophane which gives the effect of water. A large spool was covered with clay the statue glued on top and this was placed in the center of the pond.

When Civilian Defense was so important here in Los Angeles, we added to this miniature yard a number of defense items seen in yards and windows all over the city. We made a gas gong, using a large flat bottle top with a hole drilled through it. This is painted white with the words "Gas Alarm" printed in black at the top and showing a tiny air raid warden sticker at the bottom. This hangs from a white post with an iron clapper besides it just like the ones so familiar all over the city these past few years.

Then, too, I made a tiny gas mask case, air raid warden arm band (bearing the same number of my own band), and there is also a white helmet showing an air raid warden sticker and a senior warden insignia. These, as you may see, were placed on the folding chair all ready for any emergency. The window at the left displays service stars for our nephews in the service, an air raid warden sticker and a "Pump Tank Here" sign.

Now that the danger has passed (we hope) and Civilian Defense has been discontinued, we can't quite decide whether to remove these mementoes from our miniature yard, or to keep them as a reminder of what we went through these last long years.

At any rate we have been delighted to show you our little garden and hope the visit may have given some of you an idea or two for your own miniatures.

POST CARD FORUM

POST CARD FASHION

"The Blue China Book," by Ada Walker Camehl, has an interesting early day fashion note, which tells of "assemblies" held in the United States Hotel, Philadelphia, every Thursday evening throughout the winter as early as 1749, beginning at 6 o'clock and ending at 12. "Cards of admission to these functions, as well as the fashionable visiting cards of the day, were playing cards, no blank cards being brought to the colonies and nothing but playing cards imported for sale. The invitation, or name and address, were written or printed upon the blank side of the card," the back having on it something in hearts, diamonds, spades or clubs as the case might be.

A similar one in our family archives reads: "The company of Miss Nancy McComb is requested at a practising dance to be holden at— in Galande's dancing room on Friday evening next at six o'clock. Which will be conducted by the gentlemen of the school. Chambersburg 11, May, 1802."

The five of diamonds is pictured on the other side of the card.

—Mrs. Clyde A. Colley, Nebraska.

Mrs. L. S. Ferneau, Kentucky, is among those who have collections of "freaks", those cards which seldom circulate through the mails today. Some are decorated with tinsel, others are in wood, or leather, aluminum, shell, or ribbons. Old time postmen recall the great nuisance these card were when they were in their heyday.

"Post card collecting is not a fad," writes one reader. "One of the earliest clubs was founded in 1907." To which he adds, "Let's hear from some of those collectors of that era."

TAYLOR PUBLICATIONS

P. O. Box 9. Marion, Indiana.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912 and MARCH 3, 1933. The Magazine for Collectors, published monthly at Chicago, Ill., for October 1, 1945.

State of Illinois.
County of Cook, ss.
Before me a Notary Public in and for the State and County aforesaid personally appeared O. C. Lightner, who having been duly sworn according to law deposes and says that he is the publisher of HOBBIES, The Magazine for Collectors, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1933, embodied in section 537, Postal Laws and Regulations.

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, O. C. Lightner, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.
Editor, Pearl Reeder, 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.
Managing Editor, None.
Business Manager, None.

2. That the owner is Lightner Publishing Co., 2810 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

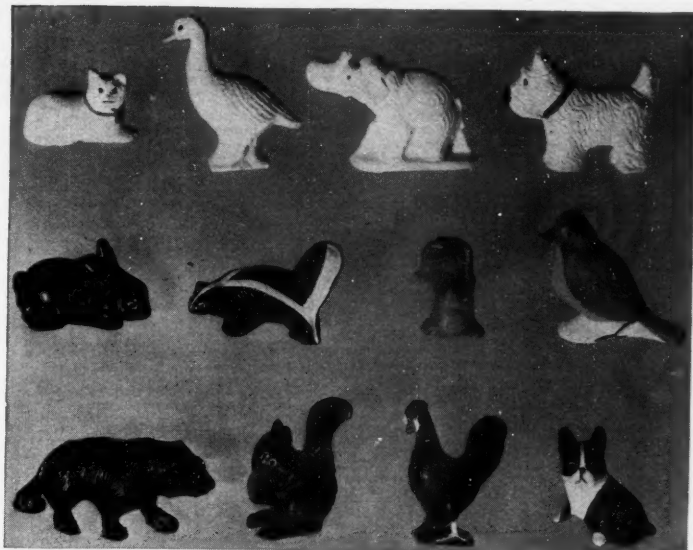

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning and holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

(Signed) O. C. Lightner Publisher.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this Twentieth day of September, 1945. (Seal) Pearl Reeder, Notary Public. (My commission expires December 15, 1948.)

of all I ever advertised. One of largest stocks in America. 9 roomfull at Osborne, Kansas, and 2 here. So look back over all my old ads. I am getting complete lists here of thousands of dollars worth I never listed before — all goods any curio or antique shop can sell at a profit. I am at last getting all listed. Have thousands of old antique fine sets to be made up to order in fine silver rings - about any stone - as old time Intaglios, Cameos. I have one of the finest lines of Rings, Bracelets, Brooches, Earrings, Navajo, Zuni, Mexico, Spain, South American. Lists 5c.
